A middle-aged woman is admitted to the emergency room with chest pains. To everyone’s surprise — including her doctor’s — she’s having a heart attack. Just months earlier, an angiogram had failed to detect signs of coronary artery disease. How could this be?

Research is finding that women and men are different, right down to the cellular level. And when it comes to cardiovascular disease, those differences are proving more fatal to women.

Women’s Heart Health at Stanford is working to change those numbers. The clinic, which opened last year, offers advanced cardiovascular clinical care and is conducting research on gender differences in heart and vessel disease.

Women do not need a doctor’s referral to come to the clinic, which assesses a woman’s risk for heart disease, and does diagnostic evaluations, risk management and treatment of cardiovascular disease.

The clinic also has a referral network that includes a dietitian, a cardiothoracic surgeon, a psychiatrist, a vascular surgeon, an endocrinologist and a gynecologist who provide gender-specific care.

Women’s Heart Health offers online risk assessment, a newsletter with access to the latest research, and lectures by top cardiologists on gender-specific heart disease.

Women’s cardiovascular disease is called “the silent epidemic,” Dr. Hannah Valantine, senior associate dean of Stanford School of Medicine and clinic co-director, told a packed room at Stanford’s Arrillaga Center on Feb. 7. An estimated 32 million American women per year — one in five — have cardiovascular disease.

Women have traditionally been treated based on research that has been done on men, according to Dr. Valantine. While death rates from heart attacks and strokes have steadily gone down for men, the numbers haven’t dropped significantly for women, she said.

“Cardiovascular disease is the leading cause of death, with 500,000 deaths annually. Fifty percent of those deaths are from coronary artery disease,” she said.

Deaths for men decreased dramatically in the last 20 years, but women’s deaths increased and have only begun to come down recently.

with the advent of gender-specific care, Dr. Valantine said.

The reasons for the discrepancy are myriad. Obesity spiked in the United States in the 1990s, especially among women, and obesity and diabetes rose in African-American women and Latinas. Gender differences occur throughout cardiovascular disease and its diagnosis and treatment, Dr. Valantine said.

Women have delayed referrals when they complain of chest pain, are treated less aggressively and receive less diagnostic testing than men, she said.

Detection problems
Part of the problem is that diagnostic testing doesn’t always show the damage inside the body. Clinical Director Dr. Jennifer Tremmel, an interventional cardiologist and researcher, has found that women with normal angiograms can have microvascular disease that consists of blocked smaller arteries and veins not detected through conventional testing.

Women also can have vascular functional abnormalities, such as endothelial dysfunction, in which cells in arteries constrict when they are supposed to dilate, she said. It is not known if these same abnormalities affect men, she added.

Dr. Valantine said 50 percent of women who have coronary-artery disease show minimal or no blockage in angiograms, compared with only 17 percent of men. And younger women fare the worst, with those under 50 having a mortality rate double that for men in the same age group. Women with diabetes, hyperlipidemia (low HDL, high triglycerides and abdominal body fat), or those who smoke also fare worse than their male counterparts, she said.

Diabetes markedly increases the risk of heart disease in women over men. The risk factor is five to seven times greater in women compared with an increase of two to three times in men, Dr. Valantine said. And researchers have found that risks for women with pre-diabetes is almost as bad as for those with full-blown diabetes — but not so in men.

The classic symptom of a heart attack — major crushing pain in the chest — is not the same for women, Dr. Valantine said. Women frequently experience pain in the jaw or shoulder (58 percent), sweating (38 percent), nausea (29 percent), shortness of breath (29 percent), indigestion (21 percent) and weakness and fatigue (8 percent).

Good news
Not all the news is bad. Although women have increased mortality from stent implantation to open clogged arteries, new technologies that put medications on stents to keep plaque from reforming are helping to lower the risks. Cardiologists are beginning to explore the role of depression and inflammatory response in cardiovascular disease, Dr. Valantine said.

The best way to prevent a heart attack is through measures such as exercise, diet, and lifestyle changes — and to start early in life, Dr. Valantine said.

The clinic offers an online Cardiovascular Sex Differences Monthly Journal Club, an electronic newsletter of research on gender differences in cardiovascular disease. And women can take an online risk assessment through the program or click on the link “Ten questions a woman should ask her healthcare provider” to access the American Heart Association’s heart-attack risk assessment.

Women must be proactive in addressing heart disease, Dr. Valantine said. To run-of-the-mill treadmill tests, Dr. Valantine said to just “say no.” Women should push their doctors to do treadmill tests that are enhanced by imaging techniques, she added.

But if symptoms of a heart attack come, women should not waste time; they should seek emergency help, Dr. Valantine stressed. Studies show that as many as 90 percent of women delayed going to the hospital when they had symptoms of heart attack, increasing their risk of death. Self-doubt, embarrassment and denial were among reasons for the delay.

Menlo School goes green

By Jane Knoerle
Almanac Lifestyles Editor

The small green invitation printed on recycled paper is a clue: Menlo School’s 58th annual benefit, to be held Friday, April 18, at the Atherton school, will reflect many shades of green.

Over the years, Menlo School benefits have “Hit the Road,” been “Unforgettable,” or headed off to “Camp Menlo.” This year, “Menlo on the Green” means handling benefit reservations and holding an auction online, and dining in a garden of eco-friendly decor.

By going green, Menlo is also celebrating the good times on the green quad of the Menlo campus, as well as honoring seniors who started as green freshmen, but now are ready to move on to greener pastures.

The green theme also centers on a celebration of spring, nature, and earth-friendly lifestyles.

The benefit features a luncheon and “senior-powered” fashion show with an encore performance at dinner, a live auction, and dancing to DJ Lou Louben.

For the 12th year, Bloomington’s at Stanford Shopping Center will fill the runway with fresh fashion looks for spring. Nearly 100 seniors, parents, faculty and school staff will model bold florals, break-out stripes, maxi and mini dresses, shorts, striped or printed cardigans, and tribal prints. Important accessories are aviator sunglasses, a fringed scarf, gladiator sandals, a fedora or pork pie hat, bold necklaces or cuffs, and colorful bags.

Mikey Hoag and Marie Lehman are co-chair of the benefit, however, the entire school community and more than 150 parents have spent nearly a year organizing the event.

“Menlo on the Green” will showcase the talents of Alex Perez, Jan Chandler, Jeffrey Adair, and BB Bernheim.

Alex Perez, producer, is the school’s creative arts director. He has worked as director, choreographer and performer in numerous Bay Area productions, with a stint on Broadway. Jan Chandler, who directs the dance segments of the show, has served as its choreographer for more than 25 years. Jeffrey Adair, co-owner of J Floral Art, is returning to coordinate the fashion show. He has produced or directed the Menlo show at various times for 19 years. BB Bernheim, owner of “BB Productions, is once again teaming up with Mr. Adair to produce the fashion show.

The online auction offers opportunities to bid on mentoring by Bay Area companies, “authors and speakers” luncheons, fine wines, and a “count me in party” for 250.

The luncheon and dinner will be catered by McCall Associations of San Francisco. The luncheon begins at 11:30 a.m. Dinner, a green-tie/black-tie event, will begin with cocktails at 6 p.m. with dinner served at 7 p.m. Highlights will be a donation drawing for the grand prize of a 2008 Honda Civic Hybrid from Anderson Honda.

M-A senior triumphs over adversity

By Dave Boyce
Almanac Staff Writer

Whatever is ahead for Rosa Alvarez, a senior at Menlo-Atherton High School and a resident of Menlo Park, she would have to be rather harsh to outweigh what she’s already endured. The Family Service Agency of San Mateo County is recognizing Rosa and nine other county residents “who have overcome extreme personal obstacles to succeed academically and to become role models for their peers.”

The 13th annual Winners Breakfast will honor Rosa, six other high school students, and three adults at the Hyatt Regency hotel at the San Francisco airport at 1333 Bayshore Highway in Burlingame from 7 to 9 a.m. on Thursday, April 10.

Rosa’s older sister Maricela is gone from her life, the victim of an unsolved murder case in San Jose in November 2003. That tragedy added hardship to a life already complicated by family problems such as alcoholism and domestic violence in their one-room Menlo Park apartment, according to a statement from the Family Service Agency of San Mateo County.

Rosa’s father works in construction but is currently unemployed, Rosa told The Almanac. The family came here from Mexico when she was in the sixth grade and could not read or speak English. Her mother, who takes in babysitting, still suffers from depression and anxiety that came on after her daughter’s murder, Rosa said.

With babies in the room, was it hard to study? “It’s kind of crowded every day and so it’s kind of difficult,” Rosa said. She apparently managed to concentrate anyway, and learn a second language. She’s taken an advanced-placement course in English literature as well as in Spanish language and Spanish literature, she said.

Rosa spent a month in Mississippi last summer in a community still recovering from Hurricane Katrina, where she helped build a pedestrian crossing over a creek, painted a house, and helped paint a mural, she said.

At M-A, Rosa Alvarez used her bi-lingual skills to mediate conflicts and assisted freshmen in their transition to high school.

While at M-A, she has used her bi-lingual skills to mediate conflicts and assisted freshmen in their transition to high school, the Family Services Agency statement said.

If she can gather the financial wherewithal to attend college, she plans to pursue business or communications, something that will enable her to “work with high school students and make a difference to her community,” said the agency.

At the breakfast

Tickets for the breakfast are $50 prepaid, and $25 for children and seniors. To buy tickets, call Maria Chavez at 403-4300, ext. 4401, or go online to www.familyserviceagency.org.

Hosting the event will be Sydnie Kohara of CBS TV, with remarks by comedian and kids advocate Michael Pritchard and Winners Breakfast alumnus Caitlin Buckley. Each honoree will receive special recognition and a $1,000 award.

The event is sponsored by Oracle Corp. The private non-profit Family Service Agency of San Mateo County has helped "struggling children, families and seniors build positive and productive lives" for 57 years, the agency said.

For more information, call 403-4300 or go to www.familyserviceagency.org.

Online auction supports M-A

The Menlo-Atherton High School’s Foundation for the Future is holding its first online auction April 11-20. The signature auction item is an Italian dinner for 10 prepared by M-A’s principal Matthew Zito, with Cindy Folker, the foundation’s director of development assisting.

Other items are a tailgate party for 30 at Stanford’s opening football game, Aug. 25; a luxury box for the San Francisco Giants’ baseball game on April 25; private tours of the historic Filoli estate in Woodside and Google’s Mountain View campus; and stays at a wide array of vacation homes in Mexico, Lake Tahoe and Hawaii.

Auction chair Trish Gump says the foundation decided to hold the auction to reach people who wanted new ways to contribute to the high school and to reach the larger community, including alumni and local businesses. The auction catalog is available at www.maauction.org. For more information, contact Trish Gump at mafoundation@yahoo.com.

“Frequently I am asked what I think of ‘the market’ particularly in light of all the negative press the housing market has received on a national level. A recent sale of mine illustrates my answer to that question perfectly. A newly constructed home on a large lot in a prime West Menlo Park location was recently put on the market. It toured for Realtor’s on a Tuesday with 175 agents coming through. By the end of the week we had four offers and the home sold for considerably over the asking price. Real Estate is a local phenomenon; in our market a desirable home that is appropriately presented and priced will be well received.”

Former Woodsider formulates calcium-rich fruit tea drinks

By Megan Rawlins
Special to The Almanac

T he USDA recommends a daily intake of more than 1,000 milligrams of calcium a day; that’s three and half 8 oz. glasses of milk, a pound of almonds, or almost two pounds of cooked greens.

Dr. Jon Dickinson, a partner in the California Pacific Orthopedics & Sports Medicine practice in San Francisco and a former Woodside resident, has developed what he thinks will be an alternate source of calcium: fruit tea.

Dr. Dickinson and his business partner, Wyck Hay, a co-founder of Celestial Seasonings, have created Osteo, a juice and tea beverage that nutrition labels claim contains 50 percent of the USDA recommendation of calcium.

In his orthopedic practice, Dr. Dickinson has seen many patients with injuries or conditions stemming from weakened bones, which he attributes to calcium deficiencies.

“Osteoporosis is a big problem in the U.S., an emerging problem,” he says. “Women are more likely to get an osteoporotic fracture than breast, ovarian and uterine cancer combined.”

“Eight to nine years ago,” he continues, “I thought it would be a good idea to produce a beverage to deliver calcium. Since then, manufacturers have added calcium to everything from orange juice to chips and crackers.”

“My kids were my test dummies until I finally came up with a combination that tasted good.”

Dr. Jon Dickinson

“I worked in my kitchen to increase the solubility of calcium,” he explains, adding, “my kids were my test dummies until I finally came up with a combination that tasted good.”

Dr. Dickinson let his idea and product hibernate for a couple of years, until he read a San Francisco Chronicle article on Wyck Hay and KaBoom, a new energy drink Mr. Hay developed in his Woodside garage.

Dr. Dickinson remembers approaching Mr. Hay, who had recently sold KaBoom, with the idea for a calcium-enriched beverage. Mr. Hay liked the idea, and soon, says Dr. Dickinson, they started working on production strategies.

“The recipe and formula were perfected, and then the fun began. “The first production run was in the spring of 2007,” says Dr. Dickinson. “Then, in August, the product arrived and was first sold on the Peninsula at Roberts market.” Osteo is now sold at Biachini’s and Draeger’s as well.

Dr. Dickinson chose Roberts because of his strong ties to the market and to Woodside.

“I grew up in Woodside,” he says. “My father was born there in 1911; I went to Woodside schools; I was even a bag boy at Roberts in high school.”

Based on consumer feedback, Dr. Dickinson and Mr. Hay have begun a second stage of development. Dr. Dickinson says they are working on a low-calorie version of Osteo and a second product targeted at a younger audience.

“Osteoporosis is thought to be a problem for older people,” he says, “but its root is in young people; over 75 percent of children don’t get enough calcium. You put bone into a container and turned his kitchen into a chemistry lab.”

Garden Club holds Woodside plant sale

Herbs, roses, and a special section of pollinator-friendly plants will be for sale at the Woodside-Atherton Garden Club’s plant sale from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, April 26, at the Woodside Library, 3140 Woodside Road in Woodside.

The plant sale takes place on the same day as the Woodside Library’s annual book sale, to be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Many of the plants offered attract all kinds of pollinators, from butterflies and hummingbirds, to bees and bats, says club member Anne Cunningham. Eighty percent of all flowering plants rely on pollinators for survival, she says.

The sale will also feature California native and Mediterranean plants, herbs, vegetables, heirloom roses, and specialty plants grown by club members in their own gardens.

All proceeds from the sale support the Woodside Library’s native plant garden, which was created in 1968 and continues to be maintained by the Woodside-Atherton Garden Club.

The club’s other community projects include working on landscaping at Stanford’s Ronald McDonald House, decorating the Ronald McDonald House holiday tree, and taking part in roadside cleanup for the Adopt-a-Highway program.

Native plant sale Saturday

Gardeners who love to grow the plants that are native to our area may want to pick up some more cover and color at a native plant sale Saturday, April 12, from 10-30 a.m. to 3 p.m., at Hidden Villa, 26870 Moody Road in Los Altos Hills, just two miles west of Foothill College.

The spring sale of the Santa Clara Valley Chapter of the California Native Plant Society will feature dozens of native species, plus seeds, bulbs, posters and cards.

The Acterra native plant nursery is also contributing plants for sale. For information, call Acterra at 962-9676, ext. 346; or go to acterra.org.

‘Voices for Youth’ at The Sequoias

What to Expect? Exceptional Real Estate Service!

"April is historically a strong month for real estate sales. Will this annual trend continue? Absolutely because the old cliché holds true – it’s all about location, location, location and we live in a desirable area with strong demand, low inventory and many qualified buyers… Resulting in possible multiple offers and new price heights."

With all the national press about a housing recession, we need to understand our local market because the housing market isn’t unhealthy everywhere. We have a healthy local economy and we are in another wealth creation cycle with strong sales demand as evidenced by the number of homes that are selling in all price ranges. In fact, last month I sold my listing on Portola Rd in Woodside with a list price of $7 million...Demand is there but we need more inventory to satisfy that demand.”
