Menlo Uptown housing project faces range of questions

By Kate Bradshaw
Almanac Staff Writer

A proposal from development company Greystar to build nearly 500 housing units on Menlo Park’s Bayside faced scrutiny from the city’s Planning Commission on Dec. 16, as the commission held a public hearing to identify what topics should be studied in the project’s environmental analysis and hosted a study session to give broader feedback on the project.

The 483-unit proposal, called Menlo Uptown, would add 441 rental apartments and 42 for-sale condos to Menlo Park’s housing stock in an area that currently has no housing — though there are other proposals to add housing there. The development would be located at 141 Jefferson Drive and 180-186 Constitution Drive.

As is required by the city, a minimum of 15% of the units — 73, in this case — would be dedicated for rent by low-income tenants. The housing units would be contained in two apartment buildings — slated to be seven stories with a maximum height of about 85 feet — and the townhome buildings, set to measure about 39 feet in height. One of the apartment buildings would have 2,100 square feet of commercial space intended to serve the public. The apartment buildings would have automated parking garages on the first two levels.

According to project applicant Andrew Morcos, senior development director at Greystar, in 2020, Menlo Park is expected to have about 2.3 jobs for every housing unit, far higher than San Mateo County’s ratio as a whole. “This imbalance is the driver of traffic and congestion in Menlo Park,” he said.

In making the case to the commission for why the housing proposal should be considered when there is already so much traffic in the former M-2 (light industrial) area rezoned under the ConnectMenlo plan, Morcos said, “The M-2 area has an even more significant imbalance than the city as a whole. In it resides four out of five of the largest Menlo Park employers.

... Housing near this job center is the only thing that will meaningfully mitigate impacts from the major employment in this area.”

He added that there is currently about a million square feet of office space under construction within walking distance of the site, which translates to roughly 5,000 new employees who will be drawn to the area.

Environmental review

During the public hearing to talk about what should be studied in the project’s environmental impact review, community members raised concerns about impacts to local schools; urged that a larger proportion of the units be dedicated for below-market-rate rent; asked that local Native American tribes, which have not been approved by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) deals with an outbreak of a new lung disease it’s calling e-cigarette and vaping products, not only on selling, but also on distributing flavored tobacco and e-cigarette products from their shelves.

The ban also imposes additional restrictions on tobacco products and broadens the city’s definition of what constitutes secondhand smoke to include “secondhand aerosol emitted from electronic cigarettes.”

The City Council on Dec. 10 asked that the city look into zoning changes to ban smoke shops and hookah lounges from operating in Menlo Park, a step that will require a review and public hearing at the Planning Commission level.

While voting for the ordinance on Dec. 17, Councilman Ray Mueller added that he is interested in creating a “narrowly tailored exception” in which electronic cigarettes could be sold under medical supervision behind a pharmacy counter, which he said he is interested in discussing in the new year.

These changes come as the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) deals with an outbreak of a new lung disease it’s calling EVALI, short for e-cigarette or vaping product use-associated lung injury. As of Dec. 17, there

Ban on flavored tobacco, vaping devices effective in Menlo Park on Jan. 17

By Kate Bradshaw
Almanac Staff Writer

In an effort to curb what’s been declared an epidemic of vaping among young people in the area, the Menlo Park City Council voted unanimously on Dec. 17 to adopt an ordinance banning the sale of vaping devices and flavored tobacco citywide, effective Jan. 17.

Across San Mateo County, electronic cigarette use among high school students was reported by California Student Tobacco Survey to be 20.8%, nearly twice the statewide prevalence of 10.9%.

Furthermore, about 86% of teens who do use tobacco products use flavored ones, and more than 80% of them who use tobacco start with flavored tobacco, according to national research cited in the city ordinance.

Similar bans were approved in early November by supervisors of San Mateo and Santa Clara counties to cover unincorporated county areas, and the Palo Alto City Council on Dec. 9 directed staff to prepare an ordinance that would ban vaping device sales in that city.

The ban broadens the city’s definition of what constitutes secondhand smoke to include “secondhand aerosol emitted from electronic cigarettes.”

superintendent at the Sequoia Union High School District, said the district has calculated that the project could add as many as 100 high school students, which would strain the capacity at the district’s local schools, TIDE Academy and Menlo-Atherton High.

“The reality is that the statutory fees do not even come close to mitigating the impacts of developments on schools,” she said. Also urged that a careful review of traffic impacts be done, including the impacts of traffic on air quality, particularly around children, since the proposed development is across Jefferson Drive from TIDE Academy.

Belle Haven resident Pam Jones said she supports, among other things, an increase in the density from 20% to 15% and that a proposed bike and pedestrian path be extended toward Belle Haven to make the development more accessible to the existing neighborhood.

The Planning Commission, for its part, gave thorough input on the proposed architecture and design of the project, even while continuing to grapple with the same key issue that it does for every Bayside proposal it encounters: how it can justify approving yet another project in an area already choking with traffic.

“We’re seeing impacts far greater than even three or four years ago in that program EIR,” said Commissioner Chris DeCardy, referring to the environmental analysis done during the ConnectMenlo rezoning process. “I think the way to address that is in how you’re looking at those impacts, and recognizing that for many people in this community, the baseline for traffic is fundamentally unacceptable, and for many people any net addition in greenhouse gases is fundamentally unacceptable.”

He added, “I think it perfectly reasonable to explore no net vehicle miles traveled, (and) no net increased demand for transportation from these projects.”

Commissioner Henry Riggs challenged the notion that building housing in a jobs-rich area would automatically enable people to live near where they work and cut car trips. In a lucky scenario, he pointed out, one person in most of the new housing units would work nearby, but that doesn’t account for roommates or partners who would be employed elsewhere. The proposal is not located near Caltrain, and the Dumbarton rail line isn’t currently active (a feasibility study and environmental review about rail possibilities on the corridor is underway, however).

Commissioners were also asked to weigh in on what the public-serving commercial space should be used for. Commission Chair Andrew Barnes’ strong recommendation was that the space be used for child care purposes, not a cafe, that the district would require an expanded space beyond what’s proposed.

The deadline for people to comment on the project’s notice of preparation, the step of the environmental review process in which the public may weigh in on what topics should be evaluated, is Friday, Jan. 10.

According to staff, the topics already chosen for further analysis are: air quality, greenhouse gas emissions, traffic noise, population and housing, transportation and tribal cultural resources. The deadline has been extended beyond the usual 30-day period to give people extra time during the holidays. People may submit comments by mail to Tom Smith, Community Development Department, 701 Laurel St., Menlo Park, CA 94025, or by email to tasmith@menlopark.org.
Q&A with Cecilia Taylor, Menlo Park’s new mayor

By Kate Bradshaw
Almanac Staff Writer

Cecilia Taylor, elected to the Menlo Park City Council in 2018, was named the city’s new mayor on Dec. 17.

Taylor first ran for City Council in 2016, but was defeated in the city’s at-large election. In August 2017, the city was threatened with a legal notice that said it had to switch to district elections or face a lawsuit on grounds that the city’s at-large election system made it harder for candidates preferred by minorities to win.

The city made the switch to district elections in time for the 2018 ballot. When Taylor ran for the seat representing her district in Belle Haven, she won by a wide margin. After serving on the council for a year, she has been chosen by her fellow City Council members to serve as the city’s mayor for 2020.

We asked her a series of questions as she starts out in the role. Here are her answers, with some minor edits for length and clarity.

When you were campaigning for City Council, I know a big goal for you was to give a voice to the Belle Haven neighborhood. A year into your council tenure, how do you feel you’ve done with that goal?

Overall, I feel a sense of accomplishment for 2019, and excitement for the year ahead as the mayor in 2020. I am very grateful that my community has placed their trust in me. In my opinion, the biggest problem facing Menlo Park?

In my opinion, the biggest problem facing our city is the impact of development without balancing the needs for transportation infrastructure and housing. This directly impacts the quality of life of our residents. For a city of our size, we have invested in over 2 million square feet of office space while neglecting to plan for adequate housing and traffic mitigations first.

Just to put it in perspective, Menlo Park ranks first throughout the Bay for the greatest year-over-year percentage increase in rents. According to the Healthy Cities, San Mateo County report (2018), 46% of Menlo Park residents are rent burdened and 96% don’t live where they work.

As mayor, I want to work with the staff to learn from the past and ensure transparency and accountability.

We need to prioritize easy access to financial reporting and accountability, clear metrics for the city’s Guiding Principles and equitable development to prevent economic and residential displacement.

What are your top three priorities as mayor this year?

While my priorities are issues affecting the city as a whole, I recognize that there is a lack of parity between districts. We need to bring all districts to the same level for us to thrive as a city. For me, equity is an investment, not just a word you insert in a sentence in a report.

My top three priorities are the following:

1. Focus on financial transparency to ensure that we are investing to meet the needs of our communities.
2. Invest in traffic infrastructure to mitigate cut-through traffic and safety; and
3. Plan equitable development by prioritizing affordable housing and transportation to address traffic impacts and jobs/housing imbalance. Focus on revitalization of downtown businesses and small businesses throughout the city.

How has serving on the council differed from your expectations?

When I was elected, I did not know what to expect. What was clear to me was that there was a need to serve and represent the communities within the city.

Instead of highlighting problems that we all know exist, I had to shift my thinking to more of a “solution mindset” in how I interacted with the council and the city staff.

I wanted to have an impact quickly and my approach had to be different because I had to learn how to operate within the City Council policies and procedures.

As mayor, I will continue to ask myself these two questions: 1) How can I be most effective? And 2) How can I encourage my city to continue to be civically engaged? We all need to work together along with the city staff to make our city a vibrant and beautiful place to live.

The big screen comes to Atherton

By Angela Swartz
Almanac Staff Writer

It’s not every day that you’ll find a crew staked out at an Atherton home to film a movie, but that was the case last month.

“The Alternate,” an indie film written and directed by Oakland resident Alrik Bursell, was filmed entirely on the Peninsula over 17 days in December, with the Atherton home serving as part of the Bay Area.”

“The neighbors have been really wonderful and open to the idea (of the film),” Bursell said during the filming. “It provides a different look. Most things are shot in Atlanta and Vancouver (Canada). You don’t see that many films shot in this part of the Bay Area.”

The tie to the Peninsula comes from the film’s lead producer, Jeff Allard, who also produced “The Texas Chainsaw Massacre,” among other films. The movie was filmed at Allard’s Atherton home and another producer’s home in Atherton.

The film, which Bursell hopes to debut at film festivals this summer or fall, is a science fiction thriller about a man who discovers a portal to another dimension. There, he finds an alternative version of his life in which he has the filmmaking career of his dreams and a perfect wife.

He switches places with this other version of himself, but comes to realize that this other life isn’t so perfect. He sees that many films shot in this part of the Bay Area.”

“The Alternate” is likely to be released to the general public in 2021, but he hopes it can be sooner. It will star Ed Gonzalez Moreno as Jake and the alternative Jake, and Natalia Dominguez as Kris and the alternative Kris.

Two burglaries in Atherton during the holidays

By Angela Swartz
Almanac Staff Writer

There were two burglaries in Atherton from Dec. 19 to Dec. 23, according to the Atherton Police Department.

In the first incident, someone stole a small safe containing about $10,000 worth of jewelry and other goods from an Atherton home around 8 p.m. on Dec. 19, according to a Dec. 23 police department bulletin. Someone broke a second-story window to enter the home on the unit block of Fenwood Drive near Glenwood Avenue. The resident was not home and the security alarm was not set at the time, police said.

The safe contained necklaces, bracelets and coins, police said. Cmdr. Joe Wade said that police don’t know of the make, model or exact dimensions of the safe.

The incident was reported to police on Dec. 22. The resident detected motion on the home’s security camera during the time of the burglary, but did not follow up on it, police said.

In the second incident, Atherton police arrested a 31-year-old San Francisco man for breaking into, and taking items from, a home’s garage, where homeowners said they saw him watching TV, according to a Dec. 24 police department bulletin.

At about 3:52 p.m. on Dec. 23, police responded to a report that a man was inside a resident’s garage on Jennings Lane, near Middlefield Road. When officers arrived, the man ducked down and appeared to reach for something, police said. He complained when officers ordered him to raise his hands. Baseball bats and a hatchet were found near the man, according to police.

Police searched the rest of the garage and determined that the man had ransacked the garage and a second garage on the property. He collected wine, a gaming system, a lantern, a blanket and other items, police said.

Police also discovered that he was on probation for vehicle theft and vandalism in San Francisco. The man was booked into San Mateo County Jail for burglary and trespassing.

This is the 20th residential burglary in town in 2019, and the majority of which occurred near the end of the year.

Police said they continue to conduct patrols during the holiday season “in an effort to deter and apprehend burglars.”

“Please remember to lock your residence and vehicles and set your alarm when you are home and away,” the Dec. 23 bulletin urged. “If you see or hear anything that is suspicious please contact the Atherton Police Department right away at 650-688-6500.”

Editor’s note: It is The Almanac’s policy to withhold the names of those arrested for most crimes until the District Attorney’s office has determined that there is sufficient evidence to file charges in the case.
Oak Knoll, Las Lomitas schools earn Distinguished Schools honor

By Angela Swartz
Almanac Staff Writer

Two local schools have been named 2020 California Distinguished Schools, according to the California Department of Education, which named the recognized schools on Dec. 18. Oak Knoll in Menlo Park and Las Lomitas in Atherton were two of the 323 elementary schools chosen for the statewide honor.

The award reflects “outstanding education programs and practices,” and represents “not just excellent teaching, learning, and collaboration, but also highly successful school climate efforts,” state Superintendent of Public Instruction Tony Thurmond said in announcing the honorees.

Oak Knoll Principal Kristen Gracia said in a prepared statement: “We believe that our success is the result of three things: the clarity of our school mission and goals, our positive school culture and climate, and our strong relationships and instruction. Our students are so fortunate to have such incredible teachers. Our high-quality teachers are the main reason our students thrive.”

The state chooses distinguished schools based on a variety of assessments, and also one model program or practice that the school chooses to highlight.

The state Department of Education chose Oak Knoll, in part, because the school’s students have maintained a high level of achievement on Smarter Balanced Assessments, the most widely used standardized tests statewide, according to a Menlo Park City School District press release.

During the 2017-18 school year — the year in which the award was based — 85% of students met or exceeded English language arts standards, and nearly 82% did so with math standards, according to state-released testing results.

At that time, the achievement of “disaggregated groups” — socio-economically disadvantaged students, students with disabilities, English learners, and students who are Hispanic, Pacific Islander or African-American — continued to rise for gains of a 14% average growth in math and a 27% average growth in English language arts across all student groups, according to the district.

“Oak Knoll serves a wide range of students with very different life experiences and speaking over a dozen different home languages, yet maintains cohesion through a positive school climate where students, teachers, and parents remain engaged and motivated,” the press release says.

In addition to its strong academic performance and assessment measures, Oak Knoll was recognized for its model practice called Teacher, Peer, Admin, according to the Menlo Park district. With this practice, two teachers and an administrator visit classrooms together, discuss observations, and then share them schoolwide.

During the 2017-18 school year, 87% of Las Lomitas students met or exceeded English language arts standards, and 88% met or exceeded math standards.

Las Lomitas district officials could not be reached for comment for this story.

Oak Knoll previously received the Distinguished School award in 2014 for its equity work and growth mindset instruction, according to the Menlo Park district.

Las Lomitas previously received the award in 2010.

Correction

A story in The Almanac’s Dec. 25 edition incorrectly described Menlo Park’s District 1 as representing the Sharon Heights neighborhood and where the seat will be up for elections in 2020. It is District 5. District 1 covers the Belle Haven neighborhood and the Bay side of the city north of U.S. 101, and is currently represented by Mayor Cecilia Taylor.

State Senate candidates to discuss climate crisis

A coalition of local environmental nonprofits have organized a forum to be held on Wednesday, Jan. 15, at which local voters can get more information on how District 13 state Senate candidates stand on environmental issues.

The nonpartisan forum is scheduled for 7 to 9:30 p.m. at the Menlo-Atherton High School performing arts center at 555 Middlefield Road. Admission is free, though people are encouraged to register.

District 13 covers the Peninsula between South San Francisco and Sunnyvale, including the Coastside. There are seven candidates: Josh Becker, Michael Brownrigg, Sally Lieber, Shelly Masur, Annie Oliva, Alexander Brownrigg, Sally Lieber, Shelly Masur, Annie Oliva, Alexander Grew and John Webster. All but Webster are expected to attend.

Participating candidates will provide opening statements, then respond to questions from the event’s cosponsors: 350 Silicon Valley, Acterra, Citizens’ Climate Lobby, and Sustainable San Mateo County. There will also be questions from the audience.

Other supporting organizations are Canopy, Carbon Free Silicon Valley, Climate Reality-Santa Clara County, Cool Block Palo Alto, Cool Planet First Presbyterian Church of Palo Alto, Elders Climate Action-NorCal, Fossil Free Mid-Peninsula, Friends of Caltrain, Friends of Edgewood Natural Preserve, Friends of Huddart & Wunderlich Parks, Peninsula Interfaith Climate Action, Sea Hugger, Sustainable Silicon Valley, Sunrise Movement-Palo Alto Hub, Thrive Alliance of Non-profits in San Mateo County, and Youth Climate Action Network.

Boys & Girls Clubs

Provides after-school academic support, enrichment, and mentoring for 1,800 low-income K-12 youth at nine locations across Menlo Park, East Palo Alto, and the North Fair Oaks neighborhood of Redwood City.

Ecumenical Hunger Program

Provides emergency food, clothing, household essentials, and sometimes financial assistance to families in need, regardless of religious preference, including Thanksgiving and Christmas baskets for more than 2,000 households.

Fair Oaks Community Center

This multi-service facility, serving the broader Redwood City community, provides assistance with child care, senior programs, citizenship and immigration, housing and employment, and crisis intervention. Programs are available in Spanish and English.

LifeMoves

Provides shelter/housing and supportive services across 18 sites in Silicon Valley and the Peninsula. Serves thousands of homeless families and individuals annually on their path back to permanent housing and self-sufficiency.

Project Read

Provides free literacy services to adults in the Menlo Park area. Trained volunteers work one-on-one to help adults improve reading, writing and English language skills, so they can function more effectively at home, at work and in the community. Basic English classes, weekly conversation clubs and volunteer-led computer enrichment are also offered.

Ravenswood Family Health Center

Provides primary medical and preventive health care for all ages at its clinic in East Palo Alto. Of the more than 17,000 registered patients, most are low-income and uninsured and live in the ethnically diverse East Palo Alto, Belle Haven, and North Fair Oaks areas.

St. Anthony’s Padua Dining Room

Serves hundreds of hot meals six days a week to people in need who walk through the doors. Funded by voluntary contributions and community grants, St. Anthony’s is the largest dining room for the needy between San Francisco and San Jose. It also offers take-home bags of food, as well as emergency food and clothing assistance.

Second Harvest Food Bank

The largest collector and distributor of food on the Peninsula, Second Harvest Food Bank distributed 52 million pounds of food last year. It gathers donations from individuals and businesses and distributes food to more than 250,000 people each month through more than 770 agencies and distribution sites in San Mateo and Santa Clara counties.

StarVista

Serves more than 32,000 people throughout San Mateo County, including children, young people and families, with counseling, prevention, early intervention, education, and residential programs. StarVista also provides crisis intervention and suicide prevention services including a 24-hour suicide crisis hotline, an alcohol and drug helpline, and a parent support hotline.

Glens neighborhood plans, wildfire prevention among new mayor’s priorities

Public service is part of the history of Woodside’s new mayor Ned Fluet, who worked as a deputy attorney general in California and as an assistant U.S. attorney, among other government positions, before moving to private practice.

So, he said, it was a natural progression for him to run for the Woodside Town Council in 2018 after four years of living in the town.

He currently works for the firm of Lakin Spears in Palo Alto, specializing in trust and estate, elder abuse, and commercial litigation.

“At the back of my mind, I wanted to support the town’s District 7,” Fluet said in an interview with The Almanac.

Although four out of the seven council seats were open in 2018, the town has district elections and Fluet was in the only contested race — the contest for the District 7 seat.

“I knocked on a lot of doors, and that was the part fun, meeting people face to face,” Fluet said.

Daniel Yost, Woodside’s mayor in 2019, said he nominated Fluet for mayor pro tem in his first year on the council, which is usually the first step to becoming mayor, in part because he was the one candidate who had run for a campaign.

A main priority of the council in 2020, Fluet said, will be to finalize the development plans for the Glens neighborhood that are taking smaller parcels out of the nonconforming category, revising rules that were limiting homeowners’ ability to expand their properties.

Woodside will be looking to take the same action in another area of town, most likely his own district, which includes the Old La Honda road areas and neighborhoods west of Portola Road.

The council will also be looking to publicize a subsidy program for vegetation management and “home hardening” to help protect homes against wildfires, Fluet said.

“We want to get the word out as much as possible about the defensible space program, with financial help up to $3,000 for home hardening, clearing brush and trees, fireproof vents,” he said.

As a Hills resident, Fluet said that he and his neighbors are constantly reminded of the wildfire threat: He and his family lost power twice in the PG&E electricity shutoffs in October, once for four days.

He said that he is in favor of any steps that could reduce the threat of fire, with one caveat: “I want (PG&E) to provide ample notice so that towns and cities can try to accommodate older and vulnerable populations who would need power for air conditioning and medical devices,” he said.

Fluet, 42, grew up in the small town of Mount Prospect, Illinois, a suburb of Chicago. He attended the University of California at Los Angeles and the Loyola University of Chicago School of Law.

His wife, Katy Fluet, is also an attorney, and the couple have two daughters.
West Bay Sanitary District is a Special Independent District of the State of California that was formed in 1902. Since then, it has grown to serve over 55,000 customers while retaining its dedication to protecting the public health and the environment by providing cost-effective sanitary sewer service.

I have been the District Manager for 10 years now and will be retiring in 2020. It’s time to let the younger men and women with fresh ideas and bright hopes for the future build upon the foundation that has been laid as they continue to make West Bay an innovative, responsive district dedicated to serving you.

I firmly believe in the Athenian Oath which calls upon all public servants to “transfer this City”—in our case, the District—“in better condition than which it was received.” I know that the fine men and women whom I have had the distinct pleasure of hiring, working with and mentoring will take their duty seriously and work to continually improve our West Bay Sanitary District. They are the best group I’ve ever worked with.

WEST BAY’S CERTIFIED STAFF ENSURES SEWER SYSTEM WORKS SAFELY AND EFFICIENTLY

You’ve probably seen our underground pipeline inspection, trenchless repairs, and sewer system cleaning vehicles on the road from time to time. The West Bay Sanitary District crews work diligently to assess the condition of the sewer system as well as cleaning all of the public sewer mains in the area year after year.

This ensures waste water collection is kept in the pipes and is transported safely underground to the local waste water treatment plant in Redwood Shores. Maintaining a sewer system is not easy and takes qualified people to do the work.

Every member of our maintenance staff has received certification through the California Water Environmental Association (CWEA). We’re also very proud that the Santa Clara Valley section of the CWEA has recognized Damian Madrigal as Supervisor of the Year and Victor Garcia as a Collection System Person of the Year.

“I am very proud of our entire staff and our success in reducing sanitary sewer overflows,” Operations Superintendent Sergio Ramirez said. “We have gone from over 40 overflows per year to only four in an entire year, well below the State’s average, and we’ll continue our efforts to reach zero!”

The district also provides a courtesy cleaning when homeowners have a conforming property line clean out. We encourage everyone to “call us first” so we can help assess whether a plumbing issue is related to the public sewer main or the private sewer lateral.

Our 30 employees work hard to keep pipes clean and wastewater flowing through pump stations all the way to the regional treatment plant in Redwood Shores. Our West Bay staff is dedicated, extensively trained in best practices, and committed to excellence. It is also supported by the absolute finest Board of Directors ever.

The District Board is comprised of sound fiscal stewards who wisely develop policy that allows the District to replace pipe and infrastructure to keep wastewater moving and who ensure that staff has all the tools, equipment and supplies needed to serve our community. The Board also invests in training, in new equipment, new maintenance techniques, new technologies and in coaching and mentoring employees.

I truly have never worked for a more supportive and unified Board in my career. I am grateful to have ended my career in service working under such a fine group of men and women, including our Board President Fran Dehn, Treasurer Roy Theile-Sardina, Secretary George Otte, Director Ned Moritz, and Director David Walker.

I am also very proud to say I have done my best to serve the terrific communities and cities of Menlo Park, Portola Valley, Atherton and unincorporated portions of San Mateo County. Thank you one and all for a perfect finish to a career in public service. Happy New Year to all and I wish you a safe and wonderful holiday season.

DISTRICT BOARD APPROVES GENERAL FUND, CAPITAL ASSETS BUDGETS FOR 2019-20

The General Fund and Capital Assets Fund budgets were approved by the Board of Directors in June. The District continues to hold adequate reserves and is on track to maintain its goal of replacing 1.5% of the system’s aging pipeline each year.

General Fund operating income for fiscal year 2019-20 is projected at $31,363,053, while expenditures are currently budgeted at $29,146,904. During the 2018-19 fiscal year, the District completed a $6,416,000 payoff of the balance owed on the $13 million in Silicon Valley Clean Water bonds issued in 2018, saving the District interest charges that would have been paid in upcoming years.

Expenditures from the Capital Assets Fund are budgeted at $6,874,050. The District maintains a strong reserve balance in accordance with good government standards and as protection against a natural disaster or other catastrophic event.

HOME SEWER WARRANTY PLANS AVAILABLE FOR WEST BAY CUSTOMERS

West Bay is continuing its partnership with Home Emergency Insurance Solutions (HEIS) to offer sewer line repair service plans to District customers. This is an optional service provided to our customers and the District receives no compensation from it.

You may be unaware that it is your responsibility as a homeowner to repair the exterior sewer line that runs from the West Bay Sanitary District service connection (typically in the center of the street) to your home. Repairs can be expensive and are usually not covered by basic homeowners insurance. HEIS provides up to $6,000 per year for repairs on sewer laterals between the home and sewer main for $18.99/month.

Have questions? Call Home Emergency Insurance Solutions at 1-855-807-6628 or visit the secure website www.WestBaySewerPlan.com.

For a sewer emergency or sewer-related problems, please call us first! You can reach us day or night at (650) 321-0384. If the main public sewer line is blocked, only West Bay has the authority to clear the system. If the public sewer main line is clear, we may advise you to contact a plumbing contractor to resolve the issue on your property.
Serving Our Community Since 1902

SHARON HEIGHTS WATER RECYCLING PROJECT RECEIVES GOLDEN ACORN AWARD

The West Bay Sanitary District is proud to be this year’s recipient of a Golden Acorn Award for Environmental Stewardship from the Menlo Park Chamber of Commerce. The Golden Acorn awards, which are now in their 43rd year and celebrate community achievement through volunteer efforts and contributions made by organizations and individuals, are a Menlo Park tradition.

The District was honored for its Sharon Heights recycled water project, a partnership with Sharon Heights Golf & Country Club for the construction of a satellite treatment facility at Sharon Heights. It has the capacity to treat a half-million gallons per day and can deliver an estimated 80 million gallons per day of recycled water. The facility will save approximately 50 millions of gallons of Hetch Hetchy water annually.

The project was the first to use recycled water in Menlo Park and replaces the drinkable water that had been used for irrigation at Sharon Heights Golf Club and in industrial applications. It has potential for future growth and is 80% complete.

The award recognizes creative, responsible use and protection of the natural environment through conservation and sustainable practices. The Sharon Heights project benefits the entire community by saving precious water resources and is cost-neutral to District ratepayers.

Funding for this $22.6 million West Bay Sanitary District Recycled Water Project—Sharon Heights has been provided in full or in part by Proposition 1, the Water Quality, Supply, and Infrastructure Improvement Act of 2014. Funding has also been provided through the Clean Water State Revolving Fund, which is capitalized through a variety of funding sources including grants from the United States Environmental Protection Agency and state bond proceeds.

HELP FIGHT CLOGS FROM FOG! (FATS, OILS AND GREASE)

Fats, oils, and grease—or FOG for short—introduced into the sewer system by West Bay residents and businesses can cause sewer clogs that disrupt service or require repairs at the homeowner’s expense. After these seemingly innocent cooking residues enter the sewer system, they solidify and can build up and plug drain lines in your home, building, or complex. FOG blockages can create sanitary sewer overflows inside your home or business and can also lead to overflow onto streets, where effluent may enter the storm drainage basins that lead to creeks and streams flowing into San Francisco Bay.

In the food industry, grease usually refers to fats and oils derived from animal and vegetable sources, including coffee grounds, meats, nuts, cereals, beans and waxes/paraffin. The District works with restaurants and businesses in a proactive FOG program that helps keep grease traps clean and encourages recycling of grease and oils instead of disposing them into the sewer system. As a result, less than 10% of District sewer blockages are FOG-related.

You can help reduce fats, oils and grease from accumulating in the pipelines by recycling or disposing of your grease in the garbage rather than pouring it down the drain. Wipe off grease and food scraps from plates, utensils, pots and pans prior to washing. Small amounts of grease can be collected in milk or ice cream cartons for disposal. If you have larger amounts, up to 10 gallons of home-generated cooking oil may be recycled at the Shoreway Material Recovery facility at 225 Shoreway Road in San Carlos.

STUDY COMPLETED ON PROPOSED RESOURCE RECOVERY CENTER

The District has completed a feasibility study to explore the viability of a recycled water treatment plant at the Flow Equalization Resource Recovery Facility at the District’s former treatment plant behind Bedwell Bayfront Park. The Resource Recovery Center could produce 500,000 gallons per day of recycled water for reuse.

Construction of the facility would require raising the levee adjacent to the facility to protect against king tides, high tides that occur twice a year.

The District is laying the groundwork for increasing the use of recycled water in East Menlo Park (Connect Menlo area). In a public-private partnership with Facebook, the West Bay Board of Directors spearheaded the effort to install 2,800 feet of purple recycled water pipe parallel with the storm drain pipe Facebook was replacing on Chilco Street. This pipe can be used in the future to distribute recycled water in the area without having to dig up the street again.

Recycled water from the proposed facility could potentially be used for irrigation, industrial purposes, firefighting, public fill stations and even for flushing toilets in the Bayfront (M-2) area. This regional approach would be sustainable, less expensive and available to a broader user base than expensive on-site treatment systems.
THE YEAR in PHOTOS

Images reflecting people, events and the spirit of our community

Over the past 12 months, The Almanac’s photographers have had a busy year documenting the stories in our coverage area. It was a year when children protested to raise awareness about climate change, and some adults protested President Donald Trump’s visit to Los Trancos Woods near Portola Valley. Protesters even came to Atherton, outside Uber investor Bill Gurley’s home, to support better working conditions and compensation for gig economy workers.

We took time to learn the stories behind groups like Menlo-Atherton High School’s cheerleading teams, the a cappella singing teams from various tech companies that came together for several Techapella fundraiser shows, and the Bawdy Caste, which performed the Rocky Horror Picture Show every month for years before the Guild Theatre closed in September.

We also captured quieter, more everyday moments too, of people finding meaning by observing and learning about the natural world; supporting children, seniors and animals in need; and dedicating themselves to art. We saw the natural world through new eyes after visiting Brookside Orchids with orchid expert Mark Pendleton, hunting for mushrooms with Dr. George Caughey and seeing avian photographer Marquis Kuhn at work.

We documented the new investments toward children’s well-being at a new playground at Nealon Park and an early learning center for preschool-aged kids. We saw Barbara Kalt, senior advocate, at work and learned how several local nonprofits have worked to support horses. And we highlighted the work of local artists like Mitchell Johnson. These photos are just a small sampling of the vibrancy in our communities we captured this year.

What were the best reads of 2019?
Local bibliophiles offer favorite titles

By Kate Bradshaw
Almanac Staff Writer

With five library locations, two bookstores and a robust book club scene within The Almanac’s coverage area, there was no shortage of local readers consuming all the literature 2019 had to offer. We asked our local book experts to share some of their favorite reads of the year and data on what titles were most popular.

Bookstore picks

Of Vuong’s book she writes: “The autobiographical debut novel by Ocean Vuong, a young queer Vietnamese poet, might well be the most beautiful book in the world. Written in the form of a letter to his mother who cannot read, the book is a lyrical, tender testament to the mother/son/grandmother relationship and their immigrant experience.”

Describing L’Heureux’s book, she states: “A posthumously published collection by beloved local author John L’Heureux, a former Jesuit priest and the longtime director of the Stanford Creative Writing Program, is the book I keep at my bedside. These illuminating stories range from humorous to tragic, each a true gift of compassion and grace.”

She also recommends “Greek Myths and Mazes” by Jan Bajtlik. She describes it as “a combination of interactive mazes and facts about Greek mythology (that) will keep you engaged and leave you more informed. Wonderful illustrations and interesting facts make this an excellent choice for the budding historian or mythologist — a unique addition to any bookshelf.”

Jack Feldman, owner of Feldman’s Books, said that since he runs a used bookstore, it can be hard to say what the most popular title sold in his store this year has been — it could be anything from “The Iliad” to something that came out recently, he noted. Generally, though, mathematics, history, poetry, literature, travel writing, children’s books and antiquarian books are popular among the store’s visitors, he added.

His personal favorite read of the last couple of years is “A Gentleman in Moscow” by Amor Towles, followed closely by “IQ84” by Haruki Murakami and “The Goldfinch” by Donna Tartt, he said.

After The Almanac contacted several local book clubs through the website Meetup.com, an organizer of the Peninsula Gal Pals’ Wine and Book Club, based in Menlo Park, reported that the group’s favorite read of the year was “Eleanor Oliphant is Completely Fine,” by Gail Honeyman.

What people read

The Almanac also contacted local libraries to find out what the most popular books that people checked out or borrowed digitally were over the course of the year.

In Menlo Park, data from Library Services Director Sean Silva with 47 checkouts; “Maybe You Should Talk to Someone: A Therapist, Her Therapist, and Our Lives Revealed,” by Lori Gottlieb, with 47 checkouts; and “The Second Mountain: The Quest for a Moral Life,” by David Brooks, with 42 checkouts. The remaining top 10 titles were, in order:

- "Redemption" by David Baldacci
- "Mrs. Everything" by Jennifer Weiner
- "Big Sky" by Kate Atkinson
- "Skin Game" by Stuart Woods and Parnell Hall
- "The New Girl" by Daniel Silva
- "Summer of '69" by Elin Hilderbrand
- "Fleishman is in Trouble" by Taffy Brodesser-Akner
- The Almanac also contacted the Atherton, Woodside and Portola Valley libraries to find out what the top titles were in those locations. Since these are all part of the San Mateo County Libraries system, it was simpler to collect the most popular titles systemwide than by specific location, according to libraries spokesperson Katie Woods.

The most popular titles in 2019 in the county library system were as follows, listed in separate categories for print and e-books.

In print:
- Adult fiction: “Where the Crawdads Sing” by Delia Owens
- Adult nonfiction: "Educated: A Memoir" by Tara Westover
- Youth picture book: "The Pigeon HAS to Go to School!"

Frequent coyote sightings in West Menlo, Sharon Heights

By Kate Bradshaw
Almanac Staff Writer

Sharon Heights and West Menlo Park residents have been making frequent posts on the online network Nextdoor recently reporting coyote sightings in the area. Peninsula Humane Society and SPCA spokeswoman Buffy Tarbox said that while the organization cannot confirm that it has received more reports of sightings than usual, it’s not uncommon for coyotes to be seen in urban areas of the Peninsula.

Whether it’s due to people leaving dog or cat food outside that draws the coyotes in, or the animals themselves — cats in particular — the coyotes are probably coming into neighborhoods because there is food there, according to Buffy Tarbox of the Peninsula Humane Society.

Whether it’s due to people leaving dog or cat food outside that draws the coyotes in, or the animals themselves — cats in particular — the coyotes are probably coming into neighborhoods because there is food there, she said.

The increase in postings may have more to do with people being more aware and paying more attention. Often, coyotes can look like dogs, and they are reported as stray dogs. Generally, the humane society receives more calls about coyotes in Daly City and South San Francisco, she said.

Coyotes live in urban areas, but are wild animals. If you see a coyote in the neighborhood, the humane society recommends avoiding it.

A few tips: Keep cats indoors and dogs on a leash while walking outside, and make sure to bring all animals in at night. Harming coyotes intentionally is illegal, Tarbox noted.

Coyotes can be active during the day or night, so seeing them during the day “does not mean they are in distress or ill,” she said. They usually hunt at dawn and dusk.

“We just want to do everything to coexist as peacefully as possible in the environment we share with them,” she said. “They don’t want a negative interaction with a human any more than humans want a negative interaction with a coyote.”

The Almanac also asked county library staffers for a book recommendation. One recommendation is “The Unkindest Tide” by Seanan McGuire, the 13th book in a fantasy series for adults.

Caroline, a senior librarian with the county wrote: “I have read almost everything this author has written, and in my opinion, there’s not a bad book in the bunch. This is the 13th volume in the story of October “Toby” Daye, knight of the realm, since she woke up from being transformed into a koi fish and trapped in a pond in the Japanese Tea Garden (yes, the one in San Francisco).

“Toby sets out with her squire, fiance and various other allies to fulfill her debt to the Sea Witch in the Duchy of Ships. Of course, things don’t go quite as planned. You’ll find elves, shapeshifters, and magical beings of all kinds in this volume, as well as adventure and intrigue and an engrossing storyline. Toby is tough but human (in a manner of speaking) and McGuire has built her a complex, interwoven world. If you want to start from the beginning (I highly recommend it!), the first book in the series is ‘Rosemary and Rue.’”

Dining out on the Peninsula

Old favorites closed, a few got revived, fine dining took flight and delivery services got bigger

by Elena Kadvany

This was both a dynamic and a trying year for the Peninsula dining scene. Palo Alto’s Maum won its first Michelin star. Bacchus Management Group, perhaps the area’s best-known restaurant group, added swanky Selby’s to its family, which includes the Village Pub in Woodside. International eateries opened or are on their way here, from Teleferic Barcelona to Singapore’s Killiney Kopitiam.

Restaurant owners spoke out about struggling to keep their businesses afloat amid a tight labor market, high turnover and the increasing cost of doing business in the Bay Area. These pressures will continue to play out in 2020, with many in the industry worried about the future of the locally owned, middle-range neighborhood restaurant.

Read on for a roundup of noteworthy restaurant news of the year and the openings we’re most looking forward to in 2020.

TEARFUL GOODBYES

We said goodbye this year to a handful of longtime eateries. The Prolific Oven (39 years) and Round Table Pizza in Palo Alto (52 years), Applewood Pizza in Menlo Park (36 years), Martin’s West in Redwood City (10 years) and Cho’s Mandarin Dim Sum in Los Altos (39 years, including at the original Palo Alto location), and Mountain View’s Tied House (31 years), which closed abruptly over the weekend, the owner said because of a need to remediate a chemical spill linked to a prior tenant’s dry cleaning business.

While there’s no singular reason for the closures, the owner of The Prolific Oven had some pertinent words for what customers can do to prevent family-run independent food businesses from becoming an endangered species: “It’s in the power of the people where they choose to spend their money,” said Regina Chan, whose parents Henry and Sophia Chan bought the bakery in 1996. “I hope that I’m wrong and that small businesses and family businesses can continue to thrive in the Bay Area, but it’s going to be up to the consumers to really show that.”

HAPPIEST REVIVALS

A happy counternarrative to all the closures was the revival of much-loved restaurants this year. Mike’s Cafe gave Palo Alto’s Midtown neighborhood its favorite restaurant back after a lengthy renovation. New owners renovated and rejuvenated the 167-year-old Alpine Inn, giving the Portola Valley community a gathering place and watering hole (now, plus wines on tap and wood-fired pizza) for generations to come. Su Hong, Palo Alto closed, but a former waiter reopened it under a new name, keeping on the same chef and staff and owners with questions if you’re unfamiliar with natural wines.

MOST EXPENSIVE BURGER

Selby’s wanted to make a name for itself by serving “the coldest martini on the West Coast,” but perhaps should have considered going with “the most expensive burger on the Peninsula.” The swanky restaurant, located on the border of Redwood City and Atherton, drew attention for its $50 Black Label cheeseburger: a patty of dry-aged hanger steak, short rib and chuck, topped with black truffles and … Époisses, a soft cow’s milk cheese from Burgundy.

A MICHELIN STAR FOR MAUM

The chefs at Maum, Palo Alto’s high-end Korean restaurant, took home their first Michelin star in June, less than a year after opening. Chef Michael Kim said the accolade had been a “life-long professional goal” for him and his wife and co-chef, Meichih, who draw on their Korean and Taiwanese roots at Maum, which means “heart and soul” in Korean. Fine dining continues to grow on the Midpeninsula, which is now home to six Michelin-starred restaurants, including Maum (Baumé, Protégé, The Village Pub, Chez TJ, Madera).

THE YEAR OF DELIVERY

In a sign of the times, DoorDash opened its first shared delivery kitchen in Redwood City in October. Under one roof, several food businesses — Nation’s Giant Hamburgers, Rooster & Rice, Humphrey Slocombe, The Halal Guys and Chick-fil-A — can deliver throughout the Peninsula without having a brick-and-mortar restaurant here. The bright red, 6,000-square-foot building is emblematic of shifts and tensions in the dining industry, spurred by the growth of third-party delivery apps like DoorDash, Caviar, UberEats and others.

NATURAL WINE BOOM

The Peninsula got its first dedicated natural wine bar this year with Salva-je. The downtown Palo Alto bar (369 Lytton Ave.) defines natural wines as those made organically on biodynamic farms with minimal intervention and little to no sulfates or other additives. (Salva-je appropriately means “wild” in Spanish.) The small, cozy Spanish-style building Salva-je occupies feels like having a drink in your friend’s living room, and the intimate setting is ideal for helping the helpful staff and owners with questions if you’re unfamiliar with natural wines.

MOST ANTICIPATED OPENINGS OF 2020

Early 2020 will see the local debut of two ambitious, modern Indian restaurants with connections to San Francisco: Ettan (518 Bryant St., Palo Alto) and Rooh (473 University Ave., Palo Alto). The former will be led by Sririth Gopinathan, a native of southern India and executive chef at the Michelin-starred Campton Place Restaurant in San Francisco. The latter is a new outpost of a popular San Francisco restaurant of the same name, but with a unique focus on open-fire cooking.

In Mountain View, beer drinkers and pretzel lovers are still not-so-patiently waiting for the much-delayed arrival of Ludwig’s German Table (383 Castro St.), which will likely materialize next year. Owner Ben Bate spoke out this year about the costly setbacks he’s faced in the city permitting process.

Selby’s Restaurant’s black-label burger with epoisses and Australian black truffles is served with fries.

John Edwards enjoys an afternoon playing his guitar at the Alpine Inn after the beloved historic restaurant, watering hole and community gathering place in Portola Valley reopened in September.

Mountain Mike’s Pizza took over the space on El Camino Real formerly occupied by Applewood Pizza, which had operated in Menlo Park for 36 years before closing in 2019.
