School bonds, state races top local ballots

By the end of the day June 6, south San Mateo County voters will have marked their ballots for as many as 30 offices — from U.S. senator to county controller — and voted yes or no on two, important state ballot measures. If they live in the Menlo Park School District, voters will also decide whether to issue $91.1 million in bonds for school construction.

The results from this June 6 primary will, of course, determine the lineup of candidates that will face voters in November.

With more than 50 choices on a typical ballot, voters can have a hard time deciding who will best represent them.

In addition to the sample ballot with the official voter information pamphlet that you get in the mail from the county elections office, a great online resource is smartvoter.org, the League of Women Voters Web site, where you can plug in your local address and get specific information about races and propositions on your ballot.

This Almanac's guide focuses on local matters and the leading candidates in contested races.

In the governor's race, for example, we report on the two leading Democratic candidates — Steve Westly and Phil Angelides — only because Mr. Westly is an Atherton resident. On the Republican side, Gov.

Arnold Schwarzenegger does not face serious opposition.

State Sen. Jackie Speier, who served as a San Mateo County supervisor after being wounded in Guyana at the Jonestown massacre, is running in a tight race for lieutenant governor with fellow-Democrats John Garamendi, the state insurance commissioner, and state Sen. Liz Figueroa of Fremont. None is a resident of the Almanac circulation area, and therefore this race is not included in this guide.

One of the hottest and nastiest races in the state is to replace Sen. Speier in the 8th state Senate district, which runs from San Francisco into north San Mateo County, and includes Woodside and Portola Valley. Duking it out for the Democratic nomination in the safe Democratic district are three political heavyweights: former San Mateo County Supervisor Mike Nevin of Daly City; Assemblyman Leland Yee of San Francisco; and former Assemblyman Lou Papan of Millbrae.

The winner will take on the winner in the Republican race between marketing manager

Schools' future up to voters

A $91 million bond measure would fund new facilities on four campuses

More students are coming to the four schools in the Menlo Park City School District whether or not voters support the $91.1 million bond measure on the June 6 ballot.

If voters approve the measure, the K-8 district will have resources to build more permanent classrooms and other facilities. If the measure is rejected, the district may have to add more portable classrooms to school sites to house the 440 more students expected by 2015.

District projections show a 20 percent growth in enrollment to 2,578 students by 2015, increasing pressure on classrooms, multi-use facilities, and outdoor space.

"I am alarmed at the increase in the kindergarten enrollment next year — 311 students are already registered" at Laurel and Oak Knoll schools, said Superintendent Ken Ranella in an interview last week.

That number exceeds the graduating eighth-grade class of 220 students, resulting in a net increase of 91 students in the district, or 4.5 percent, in one year, he said.

portable buildings — a third of the district's classrooms — the school board placed Measure U on the June 6 ballot after a multi-year research and planning process.

The measure would authorize the borrowing of $91 million through bond issues, to be paid back over 35 years. The total interest payments over that period could total $196 million, the district says.

Why the growth?

A consultant's report confirmed what trustees had suspected about enrollment growth trends. More families moving into the district have children entering kindergarten and other lower grades. Long-term residents usually sell their homes to families with school-age children. Most of the recent enrollment growth has come from families buying or moving into homes in the highest price range; typically such families have more school-age children.

Also, the district is losing fewer students to private schools. About 99 percent of fifth-graders go on to the district's Hillview Middle School, which has been recognized nationally as a "Blue Ribbon" school. Seven times it has been named a California Distinguished School.

Bond measure facts

The bond measure falls under the state's Prop 39 law, which means it can pass with the approval of 55 percent of voters, rather than the two-thirds required in other bond measures.

To qualify under this law, the vote must be conducted in a general — not a special — election. The maximum annual property tax the measure could levy is $30 per $100,000 of assessed value. The district's total outstanding bond debt cannot exceed 1.25 percent of the district's assessed valuation, which now totals $7.1 billion, according to records in the San Mateo County Controller's Office.

Also, a bond oversight committee must be established within 60 days of the election to ensure that the money is spent only for school facilities listed in the official voter information pamphlet.

District wants to replace 40 portable classrooms

District trustees unanimously voted to set the annual tax rate for the bond measure at $28 per $100,000 of assessed valuation. The district proposes to sell the bonds in a series of four installments. No bond can mature more than 35 years from the date of issuance.

What bonds buy

The $91.1 million in bond funds would pay to:

- Replace the 40 portable classrooms at Hillview, Oak Knoll, Laurel and Encinal schools with permanent ones. One-third of the district's 117 classrooms are portables, being leased at a cost of $320,000 per year. The portables also encroach on playground space. At Laurel School, 12 of the 26 classrooms are temporary portables, said Principal Nancy Hendry.

- Build 20 additional classrooms to accommodate the 15 to 20 percent projected enrollment growth over the next 10 years. Two-story classroom buildings are proposed for Hillview, Encinal and Oak Knoll. Classrooms at Laurel School would be similar to the existing "pods" that were built on the K-2 campus with funds from the district's 1995 bond measure to upgrade and modernize the schools. State law does not allow children in K-2 grades to be housed in two-story buildings, according to Superintendent Ranella.

- Provide better and larger multi-use facilities at Oak Knoll, Encinal and Hillview. The existing facilities — used for gym, assemblies and community events — were built for smaller enrollments. For example, Oak Knoll's multi-use room was built in 1952 to accommodate the school's opening enrollment of 250 students. "Today, we have 662 students, and we're bursting at the seams during assemblies and performances," said Principal David Ackerman.

- Improve traffic flow and parking at each school to increase safety and reduce the impact on surrounding neighbors.

- Complete work to modernize schools, including technology upgrades and providing access for disabled people. The work was started but unfinished because a $22 million bond measure, approved by voters in 1995, was insufficient to cover the costs.

Plans for Hillview

After hundreds of hours of study sessions and discussion, meetings with enrollment projection consultants, architects, engineers, construction managers, financial advisers, and legal counsel, and a series of meetings at each school site and a community meeting, the district came up with a proposed plan.

Changes for Hillview Middle School that serves all the district's sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders present the greatest challenge.

Some Hillview School neighbors have voiced opposition to the bond measure at a few public meetings. They object to putting any more students and buildings on the site and increasing traffic, congestion, parking problems and noise.

Enrollment at Hillview is projected to grow from 654 students now to 852 students in 2015. The site, about 8 acres at the intersection of Santa Cruz and Elder avenues, has limited expansion opportunities. The string of portable classrooms along the northerly boundary have encroached on the school's fields and outdoor space for physical education and activities.

Several conceptual drawings have been proposed and discussed, but no decision will be made until after the bond election and further discussions with architects, the construction manager, and the community, according to the superintendent and trustees.

One possibility for Hillview is

The Encinal School campus is the largest (10.5 acres) and least populated (371 students) in the district. The school board plans to change Encinal from a school with grades 3-5 to a K-5 school that would accommodate more students.

to add to the existing facilities two-story classroom buildings to replace 11 portables; build an auditorium; convert the music room to an exercise and dance facility; re-stripe the basketball courts and renovate the playfield. Estimated cost: about $28 million.

Another option is to tear down existing structures, except the multi-use building, and rebuild Hillview as a "state-of-the-art" middle school with two-story classroom buildings. This rebuild option would double the size of the playfield, add parking spaces, and improve traffic circulation, especially during pickup time. Estimated cost: about $40 million.

Other campuses

The school board is considering these plans for the other three campuses:

■ Expand Encinal School, the grade 3-5 school at 195 Encinal Ave. in Atherton, and change it to a K-5 school. Encinal has the least students (371) and the largest site (10.5 acres) in the district. Under this plan, the district would build a two-story classroom building for grades 4 and 5, plus a multi-use facility, and a district education resource center next to the district office. Estimated cost: about $22 million.

■ Change Laurel School at 95

Edge Road in Atherton, from a K-2 to K-3 school. Laurel has the smallest site and will have 504 students next August. The district would build a one-story pod of five classrooms, a mini multi-use building, and a science room. Enrollment would be reduced by shifting some of the incoming K-2 students to Encinal. Estimated cost: about 10 million.

■ Cap enrollment at Oak Knoll School, the K-5 school at 1895 Oak Knoll Lane in Menlo Park, which now has 657 students. Some incoming students would be shifted to Laurel and Encinal. The district would add a two-story classroom building to house grades 4 and 5 and a multi-use building with an indoor and outdoor stage. The kindergarten play area and upper-grade playground would be reconfigured. Estimated cost: about $17 million.

Measure U campaign

Campaign co-chairs parents Deborah Fitz and Mark Box have organized hundreds of volunteers to provide information and urge district residents to vote yes on Measure U.

About 850 people, including community leaders, school volunteers, parents, grandparents and business people, have endorsed the bond measure.

Five well-known community members submitted the ballot argument in favor of Measure U:

James K. Mackenzie, a Menlo-Atherton High School teacher; Linda R. Meier, a community volunteer; Charles R. Schwab, business executive; Charlot N. Singleton, a community volunteer; and Lucile Spurlock, a community volunteer.

The arguments against Measure U in the official voter information pamphlet are signed by John J. "Jack" Hickey, a healthcare district trustee and frequent Libertarian candidate; Kennita Watson, a board of equalization candidate; and Christopher VA Schmidt, secretary of the Libertarian Party of San Mateo County. None of the three lives in the district.

Signing the rebuttal to the argument against the measure are Karen Canty, former trustee, Menlo Park City School District; Cindy Folker, development director of the Menlo-Atherton High School Foundation for the Future; Russ Hall, founder, Legacy Venture; Mervyn Morris, founder, Mervyn's; and Barbara Tyler, a semi-retired Realtor.

| Proposed bond measure . . . . . | $140 |
| Parcel taxes . . . . .          | $511 |

- The annual tax per $100,000 of assessed value is $21 for the existing bond measure, and $28 for the proposed bond measure.
- The county assessor's office says K-8 public school districts receive 34 cents of each dollar of property tax collected.

Steep interest costs

Because the term on the $91 million school bond measure is 35 years, the interest is steep. Ken Ranella, superintendent of the Menlo Park City School District, said the estimated interest that would be paid by property owners over the 35 years is $196 million, according to the district's financial consultant.

The actual interest will depend on market rates when the bonds are issued; and if rates decline, the district may seek to refinance at lower rates.

Nasty 3-way fight to replace Sen. Jackie Speier

Woodside and Portola Valley seem a long way from the fierce city politics that engulf North San Mateo County and San Francisco.

So it is no wonder that many residents are bemused by the challenge to select among three Democratic candidates engaged in a food fight to succeed Sen. Jackie Speier in the 8th state Senate District.

By some fluke, the district has been reshaped to include the two rural towns, along with north San Mateo County and half of San Francisco.

The race for the Democratic nomination pits three political heavyweights against each other in one of the hottest races in California:

■ Former San Mateo County Supervisor Mike Nevin, a former San Francisco cop, and mayor of Daly City, who knows the county inside out and has been a major player in transportation.

■ Former Assemblyman Lou Papan of Millbrae, who was known as "The Enforcer" during 20 years in the state Legislature between 1972 and 2002.

■ Assemblyman Leland Yee, a Ph.D. child psychologist who has been a supervisor in San Francisco, and now serves as speaker pro tem in the Assembly.

The Democratic winner in June is likely to win in November in the strongly Democratic district. He will face the winner in the Republican race, which pits marketing manager Michael Skipakevich of South San Francisco against Coastsider activist Oscar Alejandro Braun.

Termed out of the Senate, Sen. Speier is in a tight three-way race for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

Three Democrats

While all three Democrats share basic goals — they all favor education, universal health care, and development linked to transportation — they differ in experience, style, and approach. And they are all in attack mode.

A blizzard of press releases, especially between Mr. Nevin and Mr. Yee, attack each other's integrity and fundraising practices. They each count a growing list of endorsements.

Mr. Papan and Mr. Yee both have substantial legislative records, primarily on state issues, from their time in the Assembly. Mr. Nevin has 12 years of experience with issues facing San Mateo County.

Telephone interviews, attendance at a forum, and review of press releases and Web sites help distinguish the candidates from each other.

Mike Nevin

Mr. Nevin said his top priorities in the Legislature would be education, universal health care, and housing linked with transportation. "Education is such a mess," he said.

For education, and many other county services, Mr. Nevin wants to make sure that money allocated to local agencies doesn't get diverted by the state for so-called emergencies.

Mr. Nevin almost used the t-word. "If you don't have enough money, you have to be brave enough to raise revenues," he said.

San Mateo County has "shown the way to universal health care by making it available to kids," he said.

Mr. Nevin, who has served on or chaired most of the transportation boards in San Mateo County and the Bay Area, is a strong advocate of transit, and of housing tied to transit. "The answer to California sprawl is to stop building out; rather we should build housing in and around the existing transportation infrastructure," he said. "This is an extremely important environmental issue."

Mr. Nevin said that passing a state-wide bond for high-speed rail from Southern California provides the only way to fund important local transportation improvements, such as building a new TransBay Terminal in San Francisco, extending Caltrain to it, and electrifying Caltrain.

"High-speed rail is the funding impetus to fix our transportation system," Mr. Nevin said. "I'll be a champion."

Mr. Nevin's endorsements include many of California's top Democrats, including U.S. senators Dianne Feinstein and Barbara Boxer, representatives Anna Eshoo and Tom Lantos; state Sen. Jackie Speier and Assemblyman Ira Ruskin; and San Francisco Mayor Gavin Newsom.

In San Mateo County, the entire Board of Supervisors backs Mr. Nevin, as does environmental activist Lennie Roberts.

Organizations backing Mr. Nevin include the San Mateo County Farm Bureau, Planned Parenthood Golden Gate, the San Mateo County Medical Association, the San Mateo County Association of Realtors, the San Mateo Central Labor Council, and several unions.

The San Francisco Chronicle and San Mateo County Times have endorsed Mr. Nevin.

Lou Papan

"Leadership and experience count. I have both," says former Assemblyman Lou Papan, who was a leader in the Assembly for 20 years. He carried the legislation that made San Francisco accountable to the state to fix its deteriorating Hetch Hetchy water system.

Mr. Papan's top priorities are education, transportation and housing, and health care.

To pay for education, Mr. Papan suggests revisiting Proposition 13, to split property tax rolls so that commercial property can be taxed differently from residential property.

"I think business will be agreeable to paying more tax on commercial property," he said. "Also think about year-round schools."

"I'm totally opposed to any new taxes. I support bond issues," Mr. Papan added. He noted the $37 billion state-wide bond measures proposed for the November ballot will help the financial picture of the state.

On transportation, Mr. Papan showed his apparent grudge against Mr. Nevin. Asked about how to fund improvements to Caltrain, he replied: "Change management. The problems in transportation are due to bad management at BART and SamTrans. All they are doing is increasing fares and closing stations."

Mr. Papan also supports housing near transportation.

He said he strongly supports universal health care. "It's absolutely essential to each and every citizen of California and the country. Everybody needs to share costs" he said.

Michael Skipakevich of South San Francisco, and Coastsider activist and litigator Oscar Alejandro Braun.

Other top positions on the ballot are the U.S. Senate seat held by Sen. Dianne Feinstein, who is being challenged by two Democrats; and Rep. Anna Eshoo, D-Atherton, who is unopposed in the primary. In November, she will face Republican account executive Rob Smith of Redwood City, Green Party activist Carol Brouillet of Palo Alto, and Libertarian engineer Brian Holtz of San Carlos.

In the 21st Assembly district, Democratic Assemblyman Ira Ruskin of Redwood City and Republican community volunteer Virginia Chang Kiraly of Menlo Park are running unopposed in the primary. They will face off in November.

Out of 20 nonpartisan offices to be filled in San Mateo County, only two have competition.

County Supervisor Rich Gordon has two challengers to his bid for a third and last term (due to term limits): Libertarian Jack Hickey of Redwood City, and Green activist Jo Chamberlain of Half Moon Bay.

Ten of 11 Superior Court judges are running unopposed, and do not appear on the ballot. Attorneys Lisa Maguire and Susan Irene Etezadi are vying for six-year term as a Superior Court judge in Office 11.

Running unopposed for election to county sheriff is Greg Munks of Portola Valley, who will succeed Don Horsley. Mr. Munks has been undersheriff, the No. 2 post in the Sheriff's Office, during all of Mr. Horsley's 13 years as sheriff.

For the first time in years, California voters are not facing a plethora of propositions to make laws about almost everything.

Just two propositions have made it onto the state ballot for June:

■ Proposition 81 would provide for a bond issue of $600 million to build and renovate public libraries in California

■ Proposition 82 would tax incomes over $400,000 for single people and $800,000 for couples to provide free preschool education for all 4-year olds whose parents want it. An in-depth look at what Prop. 82 would mean for local parents, schools and private preschools is running in next week's issue of the Almanac.

In addition, the Menlo Park School District has put Measure U on the ballot: a $91.1 million bond measure to build and modernize facilities at each of the district's four schools.

Proposition 82: Free preschool for all 4-year-olds

You'll have to look hard to find anyone with anything bad to say about preschool.

Numerous studies show that a good preschool education not only prepares children for kindergarten, but that it has a lasting effects on their social skills and emotional maturity.

While the importance of preschool is relatively uncontroversial, a thornier issue is whether Proposition 82, the Preschool for All initiative on the June 6 ballot, is the best way to make preschool accessible to every child in the state.

If Prop. 82 passes, all California 4-year-olds would have access to free, high-quality preschool programs funded by the state and administered by local county offices of education.

Currently, federal, state and

BY ANDREA GEMMET
ALMANAC STAFF WRITER

some county programs offer subsidized preschool to children from very low-income families.

Prop. 82 would amend the state constitution to guarantee that all children born on or after June 6, 2006, could attend half-day preschool programs, five-days-a-week.

Unlike the public school system, attendance would be voluntary, and private preschools would be eligible to participate.

The program would be funded by taxing the income of the state's highest earners — the approximately one-half of 1 percent of the population earning more than $400,000 per person or $800,000 per couple. This would boost the state's top "marginal" tax rate from 9.3 percent to 11 percent beginning January 1, 2007.

The tax is expected to raise $2.1 billion in the 2007-08 fiscal year, and $2.6 billion by 2010, the first year that free preschool would be offered. It would provide about $6,000 per student in annual funding, according to the state's legislative analyst. Funding from other state and federal programs could boost the amount by as much as $2,000 per student.

It would mean big increases in both salaries and education qualifications for preschool teachers. Preschool teachers would have to be paid on par with public school teachers, which could more than double their current Salaries. Prop. 82 would extend public-school teachers' collective bargaining rights to preschool teachers, even those working in private preschools.

By July 2016, preschool teachers would have to have four-year college degrees and a new early childhood education credential, and classroom aides would need 48 units of college classes and 24 units of early childhood education classes.

Currently, there are no educational requirements for aides and only about 2 1/2 years of college courses and early childhood education classes are required for teachers in state preschools. The requirements are even lower for licensed preschools.

Supervisor Rich Gordon faces two challengers

San Mateo County Supervisor Rich Gordon will not walk unopposed into his third and last term like his fellow supervisor Jerry Hill will. Both are up against a three-term limit set by law.

Two challengers to Mr. Gordon, Libertarian Jack Hickey of Emerald Lake Hills and Green Party activist Jo Chamberlain of Half Moon Bay, want their voices heard in this election to a position where, increasingly, there is no competition.

Mr. Hickey, a retired research scientist and taxpayers advocate, is a familiar name on county ballots. He has run for numerous public offices, and in 2002 was elected to the board of the Sequoia Healthcare District, which he wants to eliminate.

One of Mr. Hickey's key proposals is for the county to detach from the Midpeninsula Regional Open Space District, and build up to five revenue-producing golf courses on former open space preserves. "Open space should be self-supporting," he said.

Ms. Chamberlain, an environmental educator and former co-chair of the National Green Party, wants the county and the coast to be far greener than the county is requiring. She lives with her husband in Lobitos Canyon, in a house they built, with a "small herd of rescued feral cats."

Revisions to the Local Coastal Plan, currently under consideration by the county Board of Supervisors, allow too much growth in the mid-coast, Ms. Chamberlain said. In addition, the board is approving "McMansions" on prime agricultural land, wetlands and ridgelines. "Rich (Gordon) is approving them," she said.

Mr. Gordon noted that the new Local Coastal Plan (LCP), which will come to the county supervisors for final approval in July, allows far less building than is currently allowed. "The new LCP is much stronger in terms of coastal protection than the current plan," he said.

Mr. Gordon said in his first two terms on the board he has had a "good record of trying to make government accountable and delivering what people need the most."

Mr. Gordon cited his record in housing, transportation, environment, and children's issues. He has served on the Transportation Authority, which hands out sales tax funds for local transportation, since 1999.

He has been a leader in the "Healthy Kids" program, which provides health care to kids who slip through the cracks of other programs. And he chairs the Housing Trust, which is helping provide housing for children and working families.

"I have strong environmental credentials," Mr. Gordon said. He cited the acquisition of Mirada Surf, near Pillar Point; this 49 acres of coastal bluff was slated to become a subdivision until the county bought it for a park. "This was the first new county park in a decade," he added.

Mr. Gordon said he didn't just work on big issues. "I also worked on smaller quality-of-life issues, such as the Alameda streetscape."

Wealthy Democrats vie for governor's seat

BY ANDREA GEMMET
ALMANAC STAFF WRITER

If you own a TV, you might have noticed a campaign advertisement or two from a couple of guys trying to win the Democratic primary for the California governor's race.

Steve Westly and Phil Angelides don't have the name recognition that an Arnold Schwarzenegger does, but that doesn't mean they haven't been shelling out plenty of money — in Mr. Westly's case, much of it his own — to raise their profiles among likely voters.

They are the top two contenders in the June 6 primary, although there are a total of eight candidates vying for the chance to run as Republican Gov. Schwarzenegger's Democratic opponent in November.

There are a plethora of minor party candidates and several Republicans, but no one else is mounting a serious challenge to the governor or running a high profile campaign in the primary.

Steve Westly

Mr. Westly, who was elected to the post of state controller in 2002, is an Atherton resident with strong local ties. Born in the Southern California town of Arcadia, he's a graduate of Menlo-Atherton High School, and he earned both a bachelor's degree and an MBA from Stanford University. He returned to Stanford to teach in the graduate school of business from 1991 to 1996.

Steve Westly

Residence: Atherton
Education: Menlo-Atherton High School; bachelor's degree and MBA, Stanford University
Occupation: California state controller

Phil Angelides

Residence: Sacramento
Education: Harvard University graduate
Occupation: California state Treasurer

Mr. Westly is financing his campaign largely through his personal fortune acquired as an early executive at eBay, which he joined in 1997.

He has a long history of involvement in politics, beginning in 1978 when he worked as a legislative aide for Congressman Leo Ryan. Mr. Westly has held various roles with the California Democratic Party and the Democratic National Committee.

He defines himself as a tough fiscal watchdog, touting his efforts to fight tax cheats during his tenure as state controller, which he says netted the state an additional $3.5 billion over the past two years. Other sources put that figure closer to $1.5 billion.

He lives in Atherton with his wife Anita and their two children.

Mr. Westly's campaign Web site is Westly2006.com.

Phil Angelides

State Treasurer Phil Angelides

is a Sacramento native who was first elected to the post in 1998.

He began his career working in state government from 1975 to 1983. He switched to the private sector, going into business as a real estate developer and planning and building the community of Laguna West.

He has been active in the California Democratic Party since the 1990s and was elected its chair in 1991. Mr. Angelides served as California co-chair of the Kerry-Edwards presidential campaign in 2004.

While he, too, is a millionaire, he has financed his campaign largely through donations, and has been criticized by Mr. Westly for raising money from real estate and development interest groups.

He lives in Sacramento with his wife Julie and the youngest of their three daughters.

Now it's Ryland Kelley, playwright

By Jane Knoerle
Almanac Staff Writer

After a long career in real estate development, Ladera resident and businessman Ryland Kelley is expressing his creative side with his new play, "Lyndon."

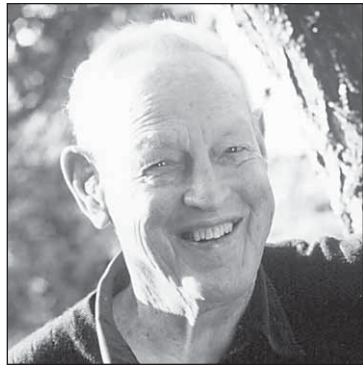

A staged reading of the play, a drama concerning former president Lyndon Baines Johnson, will be performed Wednesday and Thursday, May 24 and 25, at Second Stage, an intimate 150-seat theater in the Mountain View Center for the Performing Arts. Tickets are $25 for adults and $15 for students.

The play dramatizes Mr. Johnson's life in the late 1950s and early 1960s, from a stormy love affair with Helen Gahagan Douglas to his final confrontation with John and Robert Kennedy.

"Johnson was a brilliant leader of the Senate, manipulative, cunning, and controlling," says Mr. Kelley. "And all the while he was in passionate pursuit of the presidency."

How Johnson dealt with his drives and frustrations is the subject of the play.

Mr. Kelley relied upon the Johnson biography "Master of the Senate," by Robert Caro, for research.

The drama will be presented by a new theater company, Elysium Productions. Rush Rehm, director of the Stanford University Summer theater program, plays Lyndon Johnson. Courtney Phleger has the role of Helen Gahagan Douglas. Rachel Anderson, a doctoral candidate in drama at Stanford, is the director.

Locals are also in the cast, including Chop Keenan, Paul Reimer, Tom French, Grant Spateth and Tom Schreck. The Kelley family is represented, with Shirley and Rich Kelley reading parts.

Ry Kelley, who has published a book of poetry, "Rings of Growth," about growing up in Palo Alto, says he has always been interested in writing. He worked on the school newspaper at Palo Alto High School and as a sports writer while a student at Stanford. He also studied with famed author Wallace Stegner at Stanford. He has been writing poetry for more than 40 years and is a co-founder of the Live Poets Society.

Mr. Kelley first tried his hand at screen writing, then switched to writing one-act plays for the stage. "I find it interesting and fun," he says.

Why did he choose to write about former President Johnson? "I've always been fascinated by him. You have to admire his ability. I don't know anybody who admired him as a man."

For 53 years Mr. Kelley and his wife Shirley have been residents of Ladera, where they raised their three sons, Tom, Rich and Bruce.

During his business career with Hare, Brewer & Kelley, he was involved with many residential and commercial developments on the Midpeninsula. He continues to do real estate consulting from his Menlo Park office.

Has Mr. Kelley ever been bitten with the acting bug? "I played a second-tier pirate in a Palo Alto Children's Theater production. That was my last and final stage appearance," he says.

SENATORS

Mr. Papan's endorsements include Lt. Gov. Cruz Bustamante, the San Francisco Residential Builders Association, and a number of legislators and San Mateo city council members.

Leland Yee

Assemblyman Yee said his top priority is children. "I care deeply about kids; it's my single driving force," he said.

Other top issues for Mr. Yee are universal health care, environment, and transportation and housing.

To get more money for education, Mr. Yee said he would look for additional revenue through closing corporate loopholes and working with local officials to identify pots of money.

Mr. Yee takes credit for legislation that returned jet fuel tax money that got diverted to Oakland to the coffers of San Mateo County and San Francisco. "I brought $3 million back to San Francisco and San Mateo," he said.

On the environment, Mr. Yee promises to fight "the tremendous effort to allow offshore oil drilling." He also worries about efforts to increase the density of development on the San Mateo County coast.

Mr. Yee warns that the drive toward in-fill development near transportation could get out of hand. "There is some room for growth," he said. "But don't roll over when someone says 'transit hub,' 'transit-oriented development,' or 'smart growth.' Support it with reason and forethought."

Mr. Yee said he also supports high-speed rail and making the TransBay Terminal into a major transportation hub.

Mr. Yee's endorsements include the Sierra Club, the California Teachers Association, the California Nurses Association, the California Federation of Labor, the San Mateo County Central Labor Council, and several unions.

Individuals endorsing Mr. Yee include Sen. Joe Simitian, Menlo Park Vice Mayor Kelly Fergusson, and former mayor Steve Schmidt.

County needs poll workers

A poll worker must be a registered voter who can read and write in English. Students at least 16 years old can do it with permission from their parent or guardian, and their school.

Poll workers earn from $80 to $125, depending on their assignment, plus $25 for a training class.

Throwing a birthday party for Italy

Our thoughts often turn toward the distant past when the conversation turns to Italy—to the country's rich artistic, cultural and scientific history, spanning centuries.

So it may surprise some people that the Italy that exists today is anything but ancient. In fact, on June 2 the Italian Republic celebrates its 60th birthday—making her a mere bambina in the eyes of Old Man Time.

The Istituto Educazione Italiana (IEI) based in Atherton will celebrate the milestone with food, wine and song on Sunday, June 4, from 5 to 8 p.m. in the Menlo College Russell Center, 1000 El Camino Real in Atherton.

The event will include the presentation of scholarships

Annamaria Napolitano was co-founder of the Istituto Educazione Italiana.

from the Annamaria Napolitano Scholarship Fund, established in honor of Ms. Napolitano, a cofounder of the IEI. A teacher and a fixture in the local Italian community and at Stanford University for many years, Ms. Napolitano died in February.

The celebration will include a recital of songs and arias performed by Gloria Acerboni, Chris Corley and Karina Bassin.

There will be a buffet of Italian hors d'oeuvres and wine.

Admission is $40 per person. For tickets, send a check to the IEI at Menlo College Russell Center, 1000 El Camino Real, Atherton, CA 94027. Tickets will be held at the door.

For more information, call 543-3946. Information about the IEI is available at Italyby-theBay.org.

43+ ACRES, 2 HOMES, YEAR- ROUND CREEK, 10-15 ACRES OF FENCED PASTURE

that could easily be irrigated, dedicated water rights, orchards (apples, pears, plums, quince) swimming hole/pond fed by seasonal creek, 15+ acres of woodland, incredibly fertile land located in a coastal banana belt, 5 minutes from the San Gregorio Beach.

Feasibility studies completed for:

1. Vineyard – with minor soil amenities could have acres of grapes – good sun, plenty of water.
2. 25 acre-foot lake – adequate clays at 8-20 feet to build 20 foot dam. San Mateo County encourages water conservation by granting a density credit (allows subdivision) forevery 24.5 acre feet of water storage in certain zonings.

There are several provisions in the local coastal plan that would allow the building of an additional home. JOB OPENINGS: F/T REPORTERS

The award-winning Palo Alto Weekly is seeking two talented, experienced journalists to cover the main "Palo Alto city beat" in one of the most dynamic cities in the Bay Area, nationally known for a history rich in innovation: (1) The land use/neighborhoods reporter will be expected to write about breaking news as well as trends in developments, neighborhood quality-of-life issues, economics, City Hall activities and more. (2) The general news city/community reporter will cover other aspects of city government, community services, a large municipal utilities department and community news. There is considerable overlap and backup support necessary between the two reporters, requiring teamwork and flexibility. Both contribute to daily online news postings for the Weekly's community Web site. Attendance at some night meetings required.

Staff writers are responsible for developing several stories a week, in addition to an in-depth piece every six weeks on an issue pertaining to aspects of the city/community beat. Candidates should have at least two years of beat coverage experience, preferably in city government and community coverage. Strong writing and grammatical skills are essential.

Qualified candidates should submit a cover letter, resume and three clips to Managing Editor Marc Burkhardt, Palo Alto Weekly, 703 High St., Palo Alto, CA 94302 or e-mail mburkhardt@pawweekly.com.

About the Palo Alto Weekly: Founded in 1979, the 43,000-circulation newspaper publishes on Wednesdays and Fridays, with the Friday issue focusing on weekend and arts & entertainment activities. The newspaper specializes in articles that are analytical and insightful in addition to breaking news, features and other articles. In 1994, it became the first newspaper in the nation to publish all its articles directly on the Internet. In the past six years, the Weekly has won three first-place and two second-place awards for General Excellence among all large non-dailies in the statewide California Newspaper Publishers Association competition. It is one of the last independent, locally owned newspapers in the Bay Area.
