

North of the border

Chavez Market is building a clientele of customers from two worlds

By Jane Knoerle
Almanac Lifestyles Editor

For a little spice in your Saturday shopping, visit Chavez Market at 46 Fifth Ave. in Redwood City, just north of the Atherton border. Although you might not have hominy, tamarind pods, or cotija cheese on your shopping list, you will savor a quick trip into another culture.

You will also appreciate the old-fashioned meat market with free-range chicken and Harris Ranch steaks, produce that is often superior to regular supermarket fare, and reasonable prices.

Best of all, you can combine shopping and lunch. There's an attractive taqueria where a tasty "super-taco" will set you back $2.98. The tacos are made with white corn tortillas; your choice of pork, beef, chicken, tongue or goat meat; and refried or whole pinto beans. They're garnished with pico de gallo relish, Mexican cheese, guacamole and sour cream.

The bright and cheerful taqueria also offers burritos, tortas, quesadillas, tamales, tostadas, enchiladas and more. Menudo, the famous spicy tripe soup touted as a hangover cure, is served every Saturday and Sunday. The taqueria is open for breakfast, lunch and dinner.

Listening to customers

Chavez Market meets the needs of the largely Latino community of North Fair Oaks to the north and east, but it also caters to its nearby Atherton and Menlo Park customers to the south and west.

"We listen to our customers and try to give them what they want," says Humberto Chavez, general manager of the six Chavez Market locations. His father, David Chavez, who opened his first store in Redwood City more than two decades ago, is himself an Atherton resident. "He's in the store every day since he lives just down the street," says his son.

Father and son say the store's "old-fashioned meat market" draws customers from both worlds. Tripe, beef heart and tongue, chicken feet and chicharrones (pork cracklings) share space with Harris Ranch steaks, several kinds of shrimp, salmon and tilapia.

The counter also features fresh salsa, ceviche, queso fresco

(Mexican fresh cheese) and guacamole — traditional and home-style. "The home-style is Dad's recipe," says Humberto.

Chavez Market opened on Fifth Avenue last year in space formerly occupied by Key Market. Day laborers hanging around the property, reportedly frightening away customers, were said to be partly to blame for Key Market's closing. Laborers still gather in the neighborhood, but steer clear of the market.

"Thanks to our security guards and the sheriff's department, we don't have a problem," says Humberto. "I also think they respect the fact my dad is always on the premises and that the store is Mexican-owned."

The Almanac/Veronica Weber

Chavez Meat Market, in Redwood City in 1984. He wanted to offer traditional Mexican products that the Mexican community of Redwood City couldn't find in American-style grocery stores. The original market also offered fresh cuts of meat, traditional groceries and home-style Mexican food in its taqueria.

He opened his second store in 1993 in the heart of the Mexican community in Redwood City known as "Little Aguililla." There are now six Chavez Markets. The largest opened in 2005 in San Jose. It boasts its own tortilla factory. White corn tortillas, still warm, are delivered to each of the markets every day.

Tortillas occupy an entire department at the Fifth Avenue store. Stacks of up to 90 tortillas per package are available under the Chavez label. There are also smaller packages and house brand tortilla chips.

"Pan dulce," or Mexican sweet bread, has its own display space. Colorful sweets, often iced with bright pink frosting, include conchas, orejas, novias, tortugas, el panque, and many others. All the baked goods are prepared in Redwood City. You can also special order custom-made cakes.

The small bread display includes several kinds of white toasted bread, very crispy, like melba toast. This is eaten for breakfast with jam or jelly, says David Chavez.

Walking through the market with Humberto and David Chavez gives a glimpse into another food culture. When asked about the many kinds of soft drinks, which come in a rainbow of colors, Humberto said they were mainly sold to taqueria customers. Along with "the real thing," there were many fruit drinks, including an interesting-sounding coconut water.

Clearing up the Clamato mystery

Clamato is a combination of clam and tomato juice, often used in making Bloody Marys. It usually takes up very little space on supermarket shelves. Why such a big display at Chavez?

"You mix it with beer," says Humberto. It's a popular drink, as well as a touted cure for a hangover. Budweiser even has a ready mix product, Chelada, combining Bud Lite with Clamato.

Chavez Market has a Central and South American section featuring the foods of El Salvador, Guatemala and Peru. One interesting item is a jar of a fruit punch combination, including cherries, guava, sugar cane and cinnamon.

Asked about an extensive display of spices across from the produce department, Humberto said the store stocks eight different kinds of chiles in all sizes of packages. Seasonings also include tamarind pods, dried hibiscus flowers, bundles of stick cinnamon, and piloncillo (cones of brown sugar).

Dona Remedios teas claim to be good for just about anything that ails you. There are special teas for flu, stress, fever, coughs, even PMS.

The season for stone fruit is past, but this summer the peaches, plums, and nectarines I bought at Chavez actually tasted like real fruit. Another summer favorite was their frozen fruit bars with all sorts of interesting flavors and, sometimes, real fruit. My favorite was pina colada.

Chavez Market is big, bright and air-conditioned. And you need to drive only a few yards north of the (Atherton) border for an authentic taste of Mexico. ■

2007: A Goldilocks vintage

Moderate summer and mild fall are just right

By Mark Chamness

Special to the Almanac

For the first time in many years, Mother Nature has shown a benevolent hand to the state's wine growers. Between a temperate summer and little rain, California weather has proven to be "just right."

Not every vintage has such impeccable weather. "Last year we had huge hot peaks, and we haven't had it this year. Hope that this weather holds," frets Michael Martella, viticulturist and wine-maker at Thomas Fogarty Winery in Woodside.

Like Goldilocks

If the weather is too cold during the year, the grapes won't fully ripen. If the weather is too hot, photosynthesis shuts down and the grapes stop accumulating sugar. But when the temperature is just right, the vines flourish and can produce a very ripe crop. This year the weather provided ideal ripening conditions and harvest began earlier than normal.

"For us, spring can be cold and wet, but it was warm and dry," Mr. Matella says. "We had an early bud break and harvest was two weeks ahead of schedule." With an early spring complemented by a mild summer, many wineries were harvesting sauvignon blanc at the beginning of August.

Mr. Martella had already harvested some chardonnay and little bit of pinot noir when Mother Nature surprised us in September. The weather cooled off dramatically, and some areas were hit with rain. Many winemakers who had been working 16 hours a day during the accelerated harvest could only sit on their hands.

"The harvest has been quite spread out — an early start and a late finish," Bob Varner, wine-maker for Varner, observes. And Mr. Martella notes, "It was an early harvest, but not anymore; 2007 is going to be a normal harvest in terms of timing."

While the interruption may not appear to be a good thing, Mr. Martella is enthusiastic about the delay: "Everyone is pretty stoked about this vintage in general. I'm really looking forward to my pinot noir."

Only half the equation

When deciding on the day to harvest, wine growers not only look for ripeness, they also look for mature flavors. Immature grapes have "green" flavors like bell peppers or asparagus. In very warm years the sugar can go too high before the flavors mature. It is important that everything is in balance.

The recent cool weather slowed the rate of ripening and will allow red grapes more time to mature on the vine before harvest. "There's an old adage: The longer the grapes hang on the vine the better the wine," Mr. Martella says.

"I was able to pick at physiological ripeness with moderate sugars and good tannin structure," Mr. Varner declares, delighted with his harvest. "Should be a good year if one didn't pick too early in the beginning, or couldn't make it through the rainy spell."

Uncertainty remains

With some red grapes still on the vine, winemakers have reason to be cautious. Any number of weather events can derail a perfect vintage.

If the weather becomes cold, late ripening varieties like cabernet sauvignon and mourvedre may not fully mature. Rainfall can dilute the concentration of the flavors in the berries, cause widespread mold, or even make berries split open and rot.

Mr. Martella justifiably feels concern since some of his pinot noir won't be harvested until mid-November. He notes: "2007 has the potential to be a great vintage. But it's like counting your chickens before they hatch."

Forecast: exceptional vintage

I remain optimistic. We've had little rain and the current forecast indicates the weather will be dry and sunny for the next two weeks. October temperatures reached mid-70s to low 80s — not too hot, not too cold, but "just right" for the makings of a vintage that even Goldilocks herself would approve. ■

Spice Hut Bistro spiffs up decor, expands its space and menu

Just in time for its first anniversary in Menlo Park, the Spice Hut Bistro has shifted its dining room to the southern end of its home at 625 Oak Grove Ave. at Maloney Lane — and added a huge dash of elegance in the process.

Joseph Manoharan, who co-owns the Indian restaurant with Christin Malar, said that along with the new stylish dining area, changes at the Spice Hut include more items on the menu, particularly in the tandoori and the fish and seafood categories.

The restaurant also now serves wine and beer — the wine menu includes selections not only from California, France, Italy and Germany, but from India as well. Nandu, the restaurant's manager, says the wine industry in India is still developing, but the curious among wine lovers should find the selections of interest.

The changes were made at Spice Hut to accommodate Midpeninsula diners. Opening the eatery last November in the north end of the building, fronting Oak Grove Avenue, it didn't take long to figure out that "the clientele here is different from in other places," Mr. Manoharan says.

The owners, who took over the space of the former Mr. Chau's Chinese eatery, had always intended to renovate the southern portion of the building to create more space for the restaurant, but had to work through the city permitting process to do so, Mr. Manoharan notes.

WHAT'S COOKING

Food news in brief

With the restaurant's transformation, patrons now are seated in a considerably larger room with walls of deep burgundy and marigold and a dark wooden floor. Glass tile covers a portion of the wall behind the sleek granite bar.

The building space fronting Oak Grove Avenue that had been used before the opening of the new dining room is being renovated to accommodate groups — office parties and other social gatherings, Mr. Manoharan says.

The Spice Hut serves lunch and dinner six days a week (closed Monday). For lunch, from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., diners can order off the menu or help themselves to a buffet. Dinner is served from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m.

There's also a "to go" menu as well as catering.

For more information, call 289-0520.

And just across the way...

Also up and running on Maloney Lane, just across the way from the Spice Hut, is the new Brunello Ristorante Italiano, which opened its doors last month in newly renovated space formerly occupied by Trattoria Buon Gusto.

The restaurant, at 651-Maloney Lane, is co-owned by Elio D'Urzo, also co-owner of Sapore Italiano restaurant in Burlingame; and Giuseppe Vivacqua and Franco Tancredi, co-owners of Spiazza Cafe in San Francisco.

Brunello is open for lunch and dinner, and has a take-out menu. It also is available for private parties, and offers catering.

For more information, call 328-2778.

Salons at Marche

The salon series at Marche restaurant in downtown Menlo Park continues this month, with Nobel Laureate Burton Richter the featured guest on Tuesday, Nov. 20. Dr. Richter is expected to lecture on global climate change.

On Friday, Nov. 30, the featured guest will be Dr. Irving L. Weissman, the director of the Stanford Institute for Stem Cell Biology and Regenerative Medicine.

Salon Marche is a series of dinner lectures presented by leading artists and scientists from the community, according to Marche general manager Molly Fritz. The evenings begin with a short cocktail reception during which guests can meet each other and the featured guest. Lectures begin at 7 p.m., with dinner served during the presentation.

Seating is limited to 32 guests. The $300 cost includes food, beverage, tax and gratuity.

Marche is at 898 Santa Cruz Ave., in Menlo Park. For more information, call 324-9092.

Local events celebrate 'Grand Boulevard'

Two back-to-back events this week celebrate the process of converting El Camino Real to a "Grand Boulevard," and planning for urban shopping in suburbia.

Architect and retail planning expert Seth Harry will talk about "Leaving the Mall Behind: Creating Robust Urban Shopping Districts in a Suburban World" at a Redwood City Forum, on Wednesday, Nov. 7, from 6 to 7:45 p.m. in the Little Fox Theatre at 2209 Broadway.

Mr. Harry will discuss specific issues related to how markets work at a regional level, and suggest ways to move toward urban models in a suburban setting.

The event is $10 at the door. The following night and across the street, the county business organization SAMCEDA will host a presentation of six Grand Boulevard Awards. The event is set for Thursday, Nov. 8, from 5 to 6:30 p.m., at the History Museum, 2200 Broadway.

The awards recognize efforts to transform El Camino Real, from Daly City to San Jose, into a vibrant, safe and welcoming place to live, work and play.

Redwood City is being honored for its Downtown Precise Plan, and its Villa Montgomery housing project on El Camino. Two other Grand Boulevard Awards are going to Daly City, and one each to Sunnyvale and Colma.

People interested in attending the free event should contact Alane Gilbrech by e-mail, alane@samcar.org, or by phone, 696-8200.

Event promotes greening the county

People interested in helping San Mateo County become more green and sustainable are invited to an interactive morning dealing with climate change, energy efficiency, and green technology, on Tuesday, Nov. 13, from 9 a.m. to noon at the Green Building Exchange, 305 Main St. in Redwood City.

Sponsored by PG&E, Sustainable San Mateo County, and the Green Building Exchange, the event will feature a program and speakers, breakout sessions, a green resource fair, and sustainable snacks.

In addition, PG&E and Sustainable San Mateo County will announce a new program about developing a sustainable, green guide to San Mateo County.

For information or to sign up, contact Tyler Hammer at 638-2323, or tyler@sustainablesanmateo.org.

Restoring habitat at Bair Island

Volunteers are needed to help restore Middle Bair Island on Saturday, Nov. 10, from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Participants will canoe to the island complex in the San Francisco Bay National Wildlife Refuge, and pull up non-native plants to help restore the land to a more natural state. The event is sponsored by Save the Bay.

The fee is $25 for members, and $35 for non-members. To sign up, call 510-452-9261; or go to savesfbay.org/bayevents.

'Oughta Be A Law' entries sought

Here's an opportunity for anyone who in exasperation says, "There oughta be a law," to submit an idea for new state laws to state Sen. Joe Simitian.

"Some of the best ideas I hear for new legislation come directly from folks in the community," said Sen. Simitian. "Now is your chance to be heard."

To enter the contest, submit ideas by the Nov. 9 deadline on the senator's Web site — www.senatorsimitian.com — or request an entry form by phoning his district offices at 688-6384.

Winners will have their bill ideas introduced as legislation, and have the opportunity to testify at a hearing on their bill in the state Capitol. They also will have lunch with the senator, and receive a California State flag that has flown over the Capitol.

"But most importantly," said Sen. Simitian, "winners stand a good chance of seeing their ideas become law."

Since its inception six years ago, the contest has spawned an eclectic mix of proposals, and 10 of those ideas have become law.

Nancy Greenbach receives honors

Nancy Greenbach of Atherton, a past federal executive for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), has been named one of Northwood University's Distinguished Women of 2007. Ms. Greenbach is one of eight women to be recognized by Northwood University, a private university with residential campuses in Michigan, Florida and Texas.

Awards were to be presented Saturday, Nov. 3, at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Dallas.

Ms. Greenbach began her career with HUD in 1963, progressing from intern to federal executive. She was the first woman in the southwest region to reach this level.

Ms. Greenbach has served in leadership roles with the Red Cross, the Holbrook-Palmer Park Foundation, Peninsula Volunteers, Atherton Dames and Women in the Senate and House (WISH).

'Oliver'

Alain Pinel moves its MP office

Alain Pinel Realtors in Menlo Park has moved from 620 Santa Cruz Ave. to 1550 El Camino Real. The move was made on Friday, Oct. 26.

The Santa Cruz Avenue office opened in 1994 with 30 real estate agents. Today there are 80 agents.

"We had nowhere to expand," says office manager Mary Gebhardt.

While she says she will miss the Santa Cruz Avenue location, she and the agents are looking forward to having more space and, especially, more parking.

Half of the Alain Pinel staff had already moved to 1550 El Camino Real a year-and-a-half ago with the understanding that more space would be opening up this year. The building is owned by the Beltramo family.

The Menlo Cafe will continue to operate at the 620 Santa Cruz location, which was once a Great Western bank.

Alain Pinel has 18 offices in the Bay Area including a Woodside office at 2930 Woodside Road.

Correction

In the Oct. 24 issue of the Almanac, a story on a new electric cart for the town of Portola Valley incorrectly stated that a $3,300 unbudgeted expense for the cart would be drawn from contingency funds for the new Town Center complex.

The money will be drawn from a contingency fund, typically set at $25,000, in the town's regular annual budget.

Trudelle named volleyball star

October got off to a good start for Portola Valley resident Laura Trudelle, a junior at Westmont College in Santa Barbara and the volleyball player of the week for the week ending Oct. 7.

The honor came from the Golden State Athletic Conference and the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics following a week in which Trudelle led Westmont to two wins, including against eighth-ranked Point Loma Nazarene, said Ron Smith, Westmont's sports information director.

Trudelle produced eight kill shots in the third game of the set against Point Loma and served for five points in a rally that led to a 32-30 victory, Smith said.

"What I really like about Laura is that she improves all the time," said Coach Jim Smoot. "She is always ready to work hard and always has a smile on her face, even when I am criticizing her."
