'Greening' Oak Knoll School

Kids build huge dragon from trash in project that combines art and environmental awareness

By Marjorie Mader

Almanac Staff Writer

Kids at Oak Knoll School in Menlo Park recently learned about how much trash they throw out when they helped build a 16-foot long dragon with scales, wings, legs and eyeballs made out of pieces of trash from school lunches.

They've also learned what's recyclable and compostable.

The "Green Team" of moms came up with the idea of combining art and environmental awareness in a project that involved all of the school's 735 students (in grades K-5), as well as teachers and parents.

Concerned about the huge amount of waste (including uneaten food) that ended up in the trash as students dashed off to play, the Green Team took action.

Team leaders Barrett Moore and Bronwyn Dobberstein recruited Kathryn Rone, an artist and coordinator of the Palo Alto Art Center Foundation's Cultural Kaleidoscope, to help create the "waste" dragon project. She fashioned the dragon's skeleton by twisting and shaping aluminum pipe.

Ms. Rone, along with Oak Knoll art teacher Barbara Cottrell and parent volunteers, worked with students during lunch to attach pieces of trash to the skeleton with cable-ties. The trash was made up of items from the kids' lunches that can neither be composted or recycled. Typical items included thousands of plastic zip-type sandwich bags, foil-lined chocolate milk cartons, foil beverage pouches and prepared food wrappers.

"We're all learning by sorting (lunch remnants) what's recyclable, compostable, or trash," said Sonia Moroder, a parent volunteer. Containers for each type of leftover were placed at lunch areas for kindergartners, first- and second-graders, and third- through fifth-graders.

"This project really opened the children's eyes," said Maria Clemo, Oak Knoll's vice principal. "It raised their awareness and understanding of what trash they can recycle and what they can put in containers for compostables."

Ms. Moore estimated that the lunch waste is down by one-half. Party-day waste is down 80 percent.

Joseph Gyan, Oak Knoll's day custodian, also said there's a big reduction in the amount of garbage being hauled away from student lunches since the beginning of the project in December.

Elaine Sobouti from Allied Waste visited Oak Knoll and talked with students as they worked on the dragon.

"Many things can be recycled if they are clean and free of food," she said. As an example, a cup of yogurt is recyclable if it's clean, but not if there's yogurt left in the bottom.

"If the kids understand what is waste, they can help their parents send less" in school lunches and "take home the rest," said Ms. Moore.

Some suggestions for parents: have students bring a thermos instead of cans or bottles of beverages; use Tupperware-like containers for food and waxed paper bags for sandwiches; and send half a sandwich, instead of a whole one, to school. Instead of throwing away partially eaten lunches, bring home the container so parents can see what's being wasted.

The students made posters that they sent to food companies, such as Capri Sun, with the message: "We like your product, but not your packaging. It's not recyclable."

A major change this school year is a new lunch service provider that uses organic food, paper wrapping that's recyclable instead of plastic wrap, and utensils that are made of potato starch and are biodegradable.

Oak Knoll has made some other "green" changes. Each of the 38 classrooms has a set of re-usable dishes, glasses and utensils instead of the usual disposable paper plates and glasses. After Valentine's Day, Halloween parties, and other events, mothers take home the dishes and utensils, run them through the dishwasher, and return them to school for the next event.

The dragon project has been "a wonderful opportunity" to engage lots of kids in an activity on campus that they've enjoyed, said Ms. Clemo. ■

What should, and should not, be recycled

Recycling is easy, says Elaine Sobouti of Allied Waste Services/BFI, if people use the following guide to what should, and should not, be recycled.

- Do recycle: mixed paper (white and colored), manila folders, newspapers and inserts, unwanted mail (catalogs, envelopes, junk mail), magazines, phone books, paperback or hardback books, paperboard (cereal and tissue boxes), flattened cardboard, wood pallets.

- Don't recycle: food-contaminated paper, blueprints, blue lines, carbon paper; milk cartons and juice boxes (wax coated and unflattened); cardboard, packing materials; tissues and paper towels; black plastic of any type.

- Do recycle: glass bottles and jars, aluminum and bi-metal cans, plastic bottles and dairy containers coded #1-#7.

- Don't recycle: black plastic (any type), plastic buckets, baskets, crates, or carts; Styrofoam (any type); take-out food containers or plastic boxes; nursery plant containers; plastic grocery bags or other film plastics; ceramics, drinking glasses, window glass and mirrors; toys.

- Do recycle: plastics and food containers that contain the embossed recycling triangle with symbols 1-7.

Busted! Guilt dogs our hungry lab

We like to think that Moose, our 5-year-old chocolate Labrador retriever, is unusually intelligent.

After all, Moose has a vocabulary of dozens of words. He knows the usual ones: walk, ball, dog food, sit, stay. But he also knows that “not for dogs” means wherever we’re going he can’t come and he might as well not even try; that “it’s 5 o’clock” means someone will now feed him, and that “no ball” means he must stop dropping slobbered-on tennis balls onto laps, right now.

I’ve also been told that Moose has convinced friends or neighbors who have stopped by when we’re not home to either take him on a walk or feed him. First he’s conveyed that he’s either starving or about to explode from lack of exercise, then showed them, when questioned, where we keep the leash and the dog food. (He also has tricked family members into feeding him more than once a night with a similar routine.)

BARBARA WOOD

But if he’s so smart, we wonder, why does he always get caught when he misbehaves?

We always know when Moose has done something he knows he’s not supposed to, such as filching a loaf of bread someone carelessly left on the kitchen counter right where the dog couldn’t help smelling it. He drops his head, casts his eyes to the floor and then looks up, appearing to be pleading, “Please, don’t beat me too hard this time.”

Of course, the worst punishment this dog has ever received is a stern talking to or, if he was really, really bad: banishment to a place where we aren’t for several minutes straight.

When Moose gives us the guilty look, we know from experience to head straight to his bed in the family room, where he always hides the evidence of his wrongdoing. It’s there we’ll

Moose may look intelligent, but he just can’t hide it when he’s guilty.

“Did you do this?” — before telling him he’s a bad dog. Quite often we have trouble doing this with a straight face because Moose treats the trip over to his bed as if he is on death row, making his last walk to the electric chair. He casts his eyes down and slowly, slowly slinks over to the scene of the crime and quite contritely takes his talking to.

Alas, there seems to be no correlation between the amount of guilt the dog feels and whether he repeats the banned activity. He actually seems to have decided that “ziplock bags” equal “good things to eat,” because they often end up in his bed. Recently I found a ziplock bag that had contained five pounds of flour in Moose’s bed. It had been ripped open (there was of course, flour everywhere) but not eaten.

He’s not that stupid! ■ find the bread wrapper, the crumbs from the 14 muffins that were on the counter cooling just minutes ago, the empty chocolate box or ripped up ziplock bags that prove he ate something even if it’s not clear exactly what it was.

Once the evidence is uncovered, we call him over, show it to him and ask:

Wondering what to do on Monday nights? I have the perfect solution. Go see The Banjo Guys in Woodside. They bring high energy and solid rhythms to The Little Store restaurant on Woodside Road every Monday from 6 to 8 p.m.

The group is made up of eight musicians, but only three play at a performance. This allows them the flexibility to take a day off without messing up the others’ playing schedules.

Members of The Banjo Guys are John Robbins, the leader, singer and banjo player; Bill Lundgren, tenor banjo (which has a shorter neck); George Thum, tenor banjo; Geoff Stich, bass guitar, guitar and banjo; Larry St. Lezin, bass guitar; Sam Morocco, bass, banjo, and singer;

What's it like to be Principal for the Day?

By Katie Blenberg

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to be principal of your school? On Friday, April 11, Teresa Tiso, a fifth-grader at St. Raymond School in Menlo Park, had that opportunity.

Sister Ann Bernard stepped aside for the day and Teresa became St. Raymond's principal. Last fall, Teresa's parents Kathleen and Fred Tiso placed the winning bid for this item at the St. Raymond Casino Royale Auction of 2007.

Teresa planned many enjoyable activities for the students, including a free dress day

(when you don't have to wear the school uniform) and a longer recess.

Best of all, Teresa treated the whole school to ice-cream from Young's Ice Cream Shop in Redwood City.

For most kids this would have been enough, but Teresa is not like most kids. I first came to know Teresa for her charity work with the St. Francis Center in Redwood City. Teresa is a very caring and charitable person.

Katie's Corner

Katie Blenberg, 14, lives in Portola Valley and attends Saint Raymond Catholic School in Menlo Park.

So, in true form, Teresa found a way to help those less fortunate while being Principal for the Day. The charity Teresa chose to support is a Menlo Park organization named "My New Red Shoes."

This nonprofit organization was founded by Heather Hopkins in 2006 to supply new clothing and shoes to those who cannot afford any for the first day of school. The organization's other mission is planting the seeds of compassion, charity, and community involvement in Bay Area children. It has a great program for young people, such as the "Shiny Shoes Party," which you can read about online: mynewredshoes.com.

To raise money for this charity, Teresa asked each student to bring in a dollar in exchange for a "Free Dress Pass." Students use the pass to wear something other than their uniform to school. By the end of the day, Teresa had collected $295 for this great charity.

This experience made Teresa discover something that many students do not think about. "The day made me realize what an immense job being principal of a school is, while still rewarding at the end of the day," says Teresa.

On a final note, Teresa wrote in the school bulletin a great quote that makes one think. "If you were arrested for kindness, would there be enough evidence to convict you?" ■

Joe Dixon, bass guitar; and Marilyn Johnson, vocalist.

They are all long-term players who have played with big bands, small groups, or as individuals.

The leader, John Robbins, told me why he started the group. "After retirement I wanted to get back into banjo-playing, and the Little Store is located about three minutes from my home," he says. "It has the perfect atmosphere for playing happy banjo music in a casual setting."

His father played the banjo in San Francisco in the 1920s as part of a vaudeville act with another banjo player, he says. "I learned to play from him while I was a student at UC Berkeley in the 1950s."

The Banjo Guys play a variety of music, including sing-a-long songs, Dixieland, Cole Porter, as well as older movie classics.

The typical fan comes for dinner and drinks, and stays for the music, often for the entire two hours they play. The fans tend to be split into two groups: young parents whose 2-to-6-year-old kids love the music; and fans old enough to remember when banjo music was popular.

I asked John Robbins what was one of the most memorable experiences he had while playing. He says that it was when a Southern Californian woman came up to him and asked if he could play, "Peg O' My Heart." When we did, she walked up to him and said, "That was the worst rendition of that song I have ever heard." Then she turned and walked away. Not a great way to end an evening!

But if you are seeking fun, frolic and music on a Monday night after a hard weekend, go to the Little Store (at 3340 Woodside Road) from 6 to 8 p.m. and listen-up. You might want to bring your own banjo and see if they will let you jam with them. ■

Woodside gets ready for May Day

By Kate Daly
Special to The Almanac

Many local residents are getting ready for Woodside's traditional "May Day" activities, including a pancake breakfast, run, parade and carnival, on Saturday, May 3.

The first scheduled event is the Rotary Club of Woodside/Portola Valley's annual pancake breakfast from 8 to 10 a.m. at the Woodside Village Church. The charge is $10 for adults and $5 for children 12 and under.

Fun run, walk

Meanwhile right next door at the Woodside Library, participants will be gathering for the 17th annual May Day Fun Run & Walk. Registration starts at 7:30 a.m., with the race set to begin at 8:30 a.m.

The course is about 2.3 miles long and extends from Woodside Road to Albion and Olive Hill roads, and then back. At least a couple of hundred people are expected to turn out, making it necessary to divert traffic along the race route.

Early registration before April 23 is $10 for adults, $8 for children 14 and under, and $30 for a family of four. After that, the price will be $12 for adults and $10 for children. Registration forms are available at www.woodsiderec.com and at Town Hall and Woodside Elementary School. Participants will receive free refreshments and a T-shirt featuring artwork by Woodside School seventh-graders.

Trophies will be awarded to the first male and female finishers, and medals will be presented to the top three finishers in 10 age brackets, ranging from 8 and under to 80-plus.

The event is put on by the Woodside Recreation Committee and sponsored by four local businesses: Buck's restaurant, W.L. Butler General Contractors, Dave Tanner Construction and Landscaping, and Coldwell Banker.

Parade

The race will be over in time to close the road again for the 86th annual May Day Parade. The procession will start at 10 a.m. from Woodside School, with the school district's superintendent and principal, Dr. Dan Vinson, leading the way as grand marshal. Over the last few years, he has overseen a major construction project on campus, and is “Frequently I am asked what I think of “the market” particularly in light of all the negative press the housing market has received on a national level. A recent sale of mine illustrates my answer to that question perfectly. A newly constructed home on a large lot in a prime West Menlo Park location was recently put on the market. It toured for Realtor’s on a Tuesday with 175 agents coming through. By the end of the week we had four offers and the home sold for considerably over the asking price. Real Estate is a local phenomenon; in our market a desirable home that is appropriately presented and priced will be well received.”
