Hitting the mark

Marqs in Menlo offers harmonious combination of music, fine food, and good cheer

By Renee Batti
Almanac News Editor

Some people who enjoy attending concerts and listening to recorded music avoid restaurants that feature live music. That's usually because they also enjoy good conversation with friends and family, and too often, the volume of the music precludes conversation.

Having dinner at Marqs in Menlo one recent evening, it occurred to me early on that, at last, I might have found the perfect venue for listening to inspired music — not background music, or blaring sound, but music worth listening to — while still being able to talk with others I'm sharing a table with.

But music and conversation go only so far when you're hungry and craving well-prepared food. So, how does Marqs score on that chart? Impressively well — in some instances, deserving of the highest marks.

Owner Mark Adams, teaming up with executive chef Gary Maffia, opened the bar and grille in late February in the renovated space that formerly housed Siam Thai restaurant, at 1143 Crane St. in Menlo Park. Open for dinner Tuesday through Saturday, Marqs features the rare treat of live music every night. (On Monday nights, Marqs has a singing competition, with the winner awarded a gig at the restaurant; food is also available Mondays.)

Mr. Maffia made his name on the local food scene long ago as owner/chef of Barbarossa. At the helm in Marqs' kitchen, he's likely to gain a new generation of fans.

Marqs is subtly divided into a small dining area near the front of the restaurant, where a full menu is offered, and a bar area that includes small tables and a piano. Because there's no wall dividing the two sections, the music can be heard just fine from the dining area.

My friend and I were grateful for that when we ate there on a late spring evening, and the fabulous Nancy Gilliland was singing, accompanying herself on the piano.

That night, we started with a lovely ahi tuna carpaccio ($12). The thinly sliced tuna served as the bed for organic mixed greens, which were topped with sliced avocado. Thin red onion, capers and a drizzle of truffle oil topped off the appetizer, which was a promising way to start the meal.

We split the candied prawn salad ($14), which also came with organic greens — and also was delicious. The salad, which they divided for us in the kitchen, included cherry tomatoes, mandarin oranges, and pecans, and was finished with a honey-mustard vinaigrette.

For the entree, I had the Muscovy duck breast ($18), which was thinly sliced and served with a port cherry reduction. It was good, but the meat lacked salt and could have used a bit more of the rich and flavorful sauce. The spinach and fingerling potatoes were delicious accompaniments.

My friend ordered filet mignon and foie gras ($34) from the special menu that night — an outstanding dish that featured Black Angus beef. It was served with mashed potatoes and asparagus.

Although the portions were substantial, we managed to make room for one of the best bread puddings I've ever had ($9), served with fresh fruit and caramel sauce.

Last week, we went back to Marqs to order off the bar menu and hear more music. The bar menu is an extended version of the appetizer list for the full dinner menu.

Both the wild prawns with bordelaise sauce ($14) and the lobster spring rolls with plum sauce ($12) were terrific — the prawns and sauce fresh and flavorful, and the spring rolls fat with lobster bits. The plum sauce was light and delicate, infused with a tea-like flavor.

The lavender creme brulee ($9) also was a winner, one that had us licking our spoons and wanting more. The floral element didn't overwhelm the whole, striking a fine balance that I found to be present in just about every dish I tasted at Marqs.

The only criticism I have is that the red wines are served too warm. We had to ask for an ice bucket (promptly provided by our waiter) to cool down our bottle of Martella petite sirah, and we accidentally left it in the bucket too long. The wine we drank by the glass in the bar was also too warm.

The late Richard Olney wrote that "the myth that all red wines should be served at 'room temperature' has ruined more great wines than any other single mistreatment." The temperature in a room is often too warm to make the "myth" credible, and Mr. Olney insisted that even red wines be served in the 55-degree ballpark. The owner would do well to invest in climate-controlled storage.

When we sat down at one of the tall bar tables on our return trip last week, we nervously noticed that the featured singer and her accompanist weren't at the piano, even though it was well after the 6 p.m. start time. We asked the owner, Mr. Adams, where she was, and he replied that she would be performing soon.

About an hour later, he returned, looking embarrassed, and said he hadn't heard from her. He suspected she would be a no-show, and said such a thing had never happened before. Apologizing, he offered us a free glass of wine apiece the next time we stopped by to hear music. We would rather have heard the music, but were impressed by Mr. Adams' gesture.

The former bar manager at the Oak City Bar & Grill in Menlo Park, Mr. Adams is impressive in a number of ways. Friendly and energetic, he injects the atmosphere at Marqs with a sense of joie de vivre that adds to an already warm and comfortable environment.

It's a harmonious environment (especially when the musicians show up) that, along with the food, makes dining there an experience worth returning for. ■

■ INFORMATION

Marqs in Menlo, 1143 Crane St. in Menlo Park, is open for dinner Tuesdays through Saturdays. On Monday nights, there's a singing competition; food is also available that night. For information and reservations, call 853-1143, or go to www.marqsinmenlo.com.

Plans under way for new Cool Cafe

Restaurateur Jesse Cool says a "huge, new, beautiful catering kitchen" is under construction at her newest venture, The Cool Cafe at Menlo Business Park, which is scheduled to open in August.

The organic cafe, seating 40, will be open for lunch and take-out Monday through Friday.

After 10 years in business on Santa Cruz Avenue, Ms Cool recently closed jZCool Eatery and Wine Bar. The lease was up and the restaurant's kitchen was not large enough for the company's expanding catering business, she says.

Cool Cafe, located at 1525 O'Brien St., will serve employees of the Menlo Business Park and the surrounding east Menlo Park community, as well as provide an operating base for CoolEatz Catering.

Ms. Cool says John Tarlton of Tarlton Properties approached her three years ago about opening a cafe in the business park. "He was kind enough to wait for us until our lease was up," she says.

Jesse Cool's restaurants, catering, and seven cookbooks represent her commitment to sustainable cuisine, which she promoted long before it became mainstream. Using in-season, organic and local ingredients has been the core of her business philosophy, according to her Web site.

She is also the proprietor of Flea St. Cafe and the Cool Cafe at Cantor Arts Center at Stanford.

Sweet corn showcase

Marche Restaurant, 898 Santa Cruz Ave. in Menlo Park, is having a summer corn celebration on Friday and Saturday, July 17 and 18.

Summertime, and the feelin' is easy

By Yvonne Tally

Special to The Almanac

Kabobs, burgers, marshmallows and watermelon are lining up at the grocery checkout, ready to accompany us home. Fire up the grill, put the cushions on the chaise longue, pour yourself a cool one and relax — the air just got a little calmer, and the cooking just got a little bit easier.

Legs dangling from a swing and barbecue sauce dripping down our arm chased by the family dog's tongue somehow pass the Emily Post checklist as acceptable backyard etiquette. A "we are fam-i-ly" vibe welcomes the picnic season, ants and all.

A friend called me the other day and said, "I'm having a Fourth of July party. I need the food to sit out all day — what can I make?" "NOTHING!" I shrieked. Then I did a little research. Still nothing.

Food is a living organism, and nothing that wants to stay alive should be sitting in the sun all day, including food. Unless it's sun tea or beef jerky — nothing can hurt those. So with the picnic, beach, and backyard soiree season here, what can we bring to the party besides potato chips and store-bought cookies that is sun-safe and tasty? Plenty.

First, keep it safe. Insulated bags are a no-brainer for keeping the temperature down. But backyard entertaining would look more like a backroom storeroom if you left all the food in insulated bags. Instead, keep your food out of the sun, and placed in decorative bowls of ice. Prepare foods in small amounts and exchange them for fresh batches throughout the day. Put someone in charge of replenishing the ice, kids love this job. Mustard and catsup spoil just as mayonnaise does, so be sure to keep them iced also.

Now, to the food and drink. My all-time easy-elegant favorite is a kabob, roasted veggies, a simple salad, and watermelon lemonade. I most often grill my protein on a separate skewer from my vegetables — except for onions. Sweet Maui onions are magnificent raw or slowly cooked and caramelized. This makes them a perfect accompaniment to the kabob protein. When the fish or meat is done, the onions will taste delicious no matter how long they have cooked.

Keep the vibe going all throughout the summer, and don't forget the sunscreen — for you and the food.
