BEYOND YOSEMITE

Amazing vistas await those who explore the High Sierras on foot

BY FRANCES FREYBERG

About the author: Frances Freyberg of Menlo Park is a photographer specializing in vibrant color portraits of people, wildlife, nature and architecture from her travels to more than 50 countries. Her photographs can be found in the Portola Art Gallery at the historic Allied Arts Guild in Menlo Park, in private collections, and online at francesfreyberg.com.

Yosemite National Park is a hiker's paradise, with countless trails crisscrossing the stunning granite landscape from the top of Mt. Lyell to the foothills near El Portal. But while Yosemite's day hikes are world-class, the truly stunning vistas and solitude of California's high country wilderness await those who strap on a backpack and set out on a multi-day expedition.

What lies beyond the borders of California's most visited national park? Stretching along the High Sierras, from Yosemite Valley to Mt. Whitney, the 212-mile John Muir Trail (JMT) is one of the country's most famous long-distance hikes. It passes through beautiful and diverse scenery: sun-dappled lodgepole pine and aspen forests, stark granite peaks, secluded alpine lakes, and peaceful meadows with meandering streams.

The grandeur of the landscape is matched only by the challenge of traversing it. Backpackers ascend and descend more than 10 passes through the Sierra Nevada range, hiking at altitudes of 9,000 to 12,000 feet for most of the trip. The high point of the trail, literally and metaphorically, is 14,497-foot Mt. Whitney — the highest peak in the continental United States.

Ups and downs on the trail

I hiked a slightly shortened version of the JMT with my friends Ashley Holt (who grew up in Atherton) and Erin Conlisk, traveling from north to south in the late summer of 2008. We started just east of Tuolumne Meadows in Yosemite at the Mono/Parker Pass trailhead and joined the JMT (which actually starts in Yosemite Valley) at Garnet Lake on the second day of our 16-day journey. We calculated our total distance at just on 200 miles.

The JMT is certainly not for the faint of heart or weak of sole. Blisters are just the beginning of a hiker's woes on the trail. Sore muscles, bruised hips, bloody noses and altitude headaches are part of the daily JMT experience. Fitfully sleeping on a 1-inch pad, eating powdered soups and power bars every meal, washing yourself and your few dirty clothes in cold mountain streams, and digging a hole for your toilet each morning probably won't appeal to the 5-star hotel crowd. And that's ignoring the daily 12.5-mile hike, carrying a 40-50 pound pack.

On Day One, the novelty of the experience made it fun, and, of course, I still had clean clothes. On Day Two, I wondered why we hadn't chosen a nice beach holiday instead. On Day Three, having lost the trail several times and exposed my embarrassingly inadequate training, I was just about ready to call it quits.

But by Day Four, I finally started to understand why people hike the JMT over and over again. It's not until you get far enough from paved access roads that you really get to experience the vast beauty and solitude of the High Sierras. Once we passed Devil's Postpile National Monument (the last easy car access to the northern part of the trail), we usually met only 10 to 20 hikers each day. Most of the time, it felt as if we had the entire mountain range to ourselves.

Sleeping on a bed of granite admittedly isn't comfortable, but it's the thick blanket of stars overhead that makes it worthwhile. Few experiences compare to watching the sun rise over a glassy alpine lake, the surrounding mountains touched by the morning light, and the air so still that you can hear the fish jumping.

More than just a pretty view

While the scenery alone is easily worth the trip, it's the friendships, the self-confidence and the funny stories that remain long after the hike is over. Hikers will cheer one another up grueling mountain climbs, swap route and campsite recommendations, and even share their equipment and coveted snacks when needed. On the trail, acquaintances quickly become friends, and friends become family.

Finally, there's something about pushing your body and mind to the limit — relying only on your strength and your friends to see you over the next mountain pass — that's uniquely humbling and confidence-building at the same time.

For most people, hiking the JMT is a once-in-a-lifetime experience. But whether you hike it once or every summer, in full or in part, take the time to explore the Sierras on foot. It's the best way to experience California's beautiful high country wilderness. ■

Not much time to sign literacy 'declaration' at library

By Renee Batti

Almanac News Editor

Menlo Park Library patrons have until Wednesday, July 14, to put their John Hancock on a document passing through town on its way to Washington, D.C., after traveling thousands of miles across the country: the Declaration of the Right to Literacy.

The declaration, in the form of a scroll, was scheduled to arrive at the library on July 9, although it was delayed in transit from Sacramento. But a copy of the declaration was put on display that day, and parchment paper was available to sign by all who support the declaration's assertion that all U.S. residents, "regardless of age or status, (should) be able to read and write in order to participate fully and equitably in our democracy," and that the country's educational system needs to be transformed to achieve that end.

The scroll has already been signed by thousands of people, according to organizers of the project, who aim to present the scroll to President Obama in September.

Menlo Park Mayor Rich Cline said he intends to add his signature to the scroll, joining mayors and other elected officials from around the country. Others signing the scroll include business and church leaders, service providers, adult literacy students, volunteers, educational organizations, and community residents from all over the country, according to a press release.

The Declaration of the Right to Literacy was conceived at a 2009 convention of the Literacy Powerline, a national group working to increase literacy. The project has been endorsed by the U.S. Conference of Mayors, according to the press release.

The declaration states, in part, that "the global competitiveness and economic security of our nation and well-being of our citizens are seriously held back by widespread low literacy in the United States." Therefore, it continues, "literacy must be a national priority and an integral part of our country's public policies, supported by an educational system that equips all learners to make informed decisions, manage their lives effectively, and achieve their fullest potential and contribution."

Locally, the scroll project is sponsored by Project Read-Menlo Park and the Menlo Park Library. It has been placed on a table in the library's main hall, according to Outreach Librarian Roberta Roth, who is also on the Project Read staff.

The Menlo Park Library is at 800 Alma St.

Project Read has offered free English-language tutoring to adults in the community since 1985. The program currently has more than 100 adult learners and 90 volunteer tutors, according to Ms. Roth.

Go to literacypowerline.com for more information about the declaration project. ■

County to receive funds for energy retrofit job training, placement

San Mateo County will receive $2.5 million from the U.S. Department of Labor for the Human Services Agency's Home Energy Retrofit Occupations (HERO) project, Rep. Anna G. Eshoo, D-Menlo Park, has announced.

The grant is part of $13.7 million allocated by the Department of Labor for job training programs at community colleges and organizations in California, according to a press release from Rep. Eshoo's office.

HERO provides unemployed workers — often veterans — with training, and assists with job placement.

Debs bow at Peninsula Ball

Fifteen young women made their debut before 250 friends and family members at the 50th Peninsula Ball, held June 19 at the Crowne Plaza Cabana Hotel in Palo Alto.

The debs wore traditional white gowns, long white gloves, and carried bouquets of white roses. The hotel ballroom was transformed into an all-white garden setting. Tables were decorated with gold cloths and white flowers in silver vases.

Valerie Soltau and Jayne

Mordell were co-chairs of the anniversary event, with Bridget Madigan as honorary chair. The evening, which benefited the Boys & Girls Clubs of the Peninsula, was a time for memories for those who had made their own debuts at past Peninsula Balls. Elizabeth Ross, a founding member of the ball, was greeted with a standing ovation.

The evening was concluded with dancing to the Robert Vickers Orchestra.

School district recognizes 101 years of teaching

By Anne Campbell

Superintendent, Portola Valley School District

The Portola Valley School District recently honored a distinguished group of retirees: Barbara Gardyn, Ormondale kindergarten teacher; Norma Remke, Corte Madera resource specialist; and Jean Turri, Ormondale third-grade teacher.

Together, these ladies have amassed over 101 years of teaching. That's a lot of Back-to-School Nights, parent conferences, report cards, and lesson planning.

Barbara Gardyn began her teaching career in Rochester, New York, where she taught second grade. After moving to California, teaching in South San Francisco, and raising a family (including Ormondale teacher Deena Bertolina), Ms. Gardyn joined the Portola Valley School District in 1996, where she has happily taught kindergarten ever since.

An ardent advocate for developmentally appropriate school curriculum, especially for our youngest students, Ms. Gardyn has served in a leadership role in the California Kindergarten Association. She has been a vital link to the world of school for students and parents alike, as they have transitioned from home and preschool to the world of Ormondale and elementary school.

Room 8 will certainly miss Ms. Gardyn's buoyant personality and knowledge of kindergarten when school opens in August, but three adorable grandchildren await!

Norma Remke actually began her career in the Portola Valley district as a parent, being an active member of the PTA while her own children attended district schools. She enjoyed the district experience so much, that she joined the staff in 1985.

Anyone who wanders around the Corte Madera campus after school will often find Ms. Remke working late into the evening, making sure that when her students arrive at school the next day they have lessons that are well-prepared and educational experiences that are relevant to their specific learning needs.

A Michigan native, Ms. Remke is a loyal fan of all the Detroit teams. As she retires to pursue exciting new life adventures, she gives up the No. 1 spot on the district Teacher Seniority List to someone else.

When Ormondale clapped-out its third-graders on June 11, Jean Turri ran through the halls one last time with her graduating class. This year, though, she ran not only into the bliss of summer, but also into the joys of retirement.

Ms. Turri has been a teacher for 41 consecutive years, and has served students in the Laguna Salada, Burlingame, Hillsborough, and Portola Valley school districts. She is known throughout the Peninsula as an accomplished mathematics instructor, mentor, and presenter, so we count ourselves very lucky to have had her services as a teacher in Portola Valley for the past 11 years.

As an individual who loves to stay busy and try new things, in her retirement Jean will undoubtedly continue her Zumba studies, make many trips to Apple's Genius Bar, and discover new worlds to conquer.

The Portola Valley School District wishes this fine trio of retirees well as they head off to the adventures that retirement holds in store for them. A most happy and well-deserved retirement to Barbara Gardyn, Norma Remke and Jean Turri.

Anne Campbell is superintendent of the Portola Valley School District.

La Entrada graduates 99 eighth-graders

La Entrada's Class of 2010 received diplomas June 10 during a festive ceremony in the middle school's gym that featured class speakers, music, awards, and short recorded student reflections on their times in the Las Lomas School District.

The 99 eighth-graders entered the gym to "Yellow" by Cold Play and exited to "Ain't No Mountain High Enough" by Marvin Gaye.

Eric Hartwig, superintendent of the Las Lomas School District, welcomed the students, their families and guests. Jill Galbraith, student body president, served as master of ceremonies.

Chandler Wickers, Spencer Murphy, Zoe Pacalin and Kaela Han were selected as the featured student speakers. All eighth-graders wrote an essay in their English classes. The speeches were narrowed to finalists who gave their speeches to teachers serving as judges. Thomas Suesser led the flag salute.

GRADUATION 2010

Sonya Dineen, assistant principal, presented the Larry McCarty Inspirational Award to eighth-grader Sabihi Viswanathan, who was nominated by a peer and chosen by a committee from the Larry McCarty Foundation for Kids and school representatives.
