As usual in this season, spring is busting out all over, and in Woodside, there's a new venue for farm-grown products: the Sunday afternoon farmers' market at the elementary school. There are organic vegetables, grass-fed beef, fish, vegetables grown in cooperation with fish. It's a cornucopia.

The farmers' market in the school parking lot at 3195 Woodside Road is nearly two months old. Patrons of the Wednesday afternoon Skylonda market will recognize faces and layout. Like Skylonda, the downtown market is small — eight to 10 vendors — in two rows, and it's under the same management: Maggie Foard, the founder of goat's milk chocolate vendor Kidding Around With Chocolate in La Honda and author of the cookbook "Goat Cheese."

Ms. Foard's website lists 24 vendors so there are changes from week to week. Among the vendors there on Mother's Day, May 12, were Farmageddon, Ouroboros Farms and Leftcoast Grassfed Beef, all from Pescadero; One Ocean Seafood from Belmont; Nut n' Bean hummus and nut butters from Hayward; and North Bay Curds & Whey, a cheese maker from near Bodega Bay.

More vendors than there is room for is something of a necessity, Ms. Foard said in an email. "Using small artisan vendors means that they only have so much man power and so much product."

Chicken and pork from Early Bird Ranch comes only on the first Sunday of the month. "It's a huge amount of work to produce and sell a quality product like theirs," she said. "I look forward to something special from them. When you have to wait for perfection, you can really appreciate the work that's gone in and it seems to taste even better!"

Flour Chylde Bakery was there on Mother's Day. The Novato bakery offered gluten-free cakes, muffins and bars and distributed its samples on compostable paper — because San Mateo County allows it, owner and baker Catherine Bragg told the Almanac. In Contra Costa County, according to the county's Environmental Health website, vendors must put samples "in approved, clean covered containers," which means plastic cups with plastic lids, Ms. Bragg said.

"Regardless of the end process of such materials, it is an unnecessary waste of money as well as natural resources," Ms. Bragg said. "Our process, which is approved by most other counties, requires less or "assistant farmers," as its website calls them. The system is mostly self-sustaining in that the plant roots extract nutrients from the waste in the water produced by the fish, "creating a perfectly synergistic cycle." The fish eat lettuce trimmings, worms and insect larvae, and the system is topped off occasionally to replace water lost to evaporation and absorption by plants, says the website.

Water buffaloes make milk, and North Bay Curds & Whey makes cheese out of that milk and brings it to Woodside every other week, cheesemaker Alissa Shethar told the Almanac. The milk is 10 percent fat and 9 percent lactose. "It's very good for cheese-making," Ms. Shethar said. The water buffaloes' ancestry passes through Florida to Jamaica, she said.

The future could include "impromptu" events such as cookbook author signings and food pairings, Ms. Foard said. A small mushroom farm is coming in June, she said.

packaging for an important experience." So Flour Chylde avoids Contra Costa County.

Flour Chylde also distributes unsold goods to the homeless — and composts its stale goods, an unusual step for commercial bakers, Ms. Bragg said. "We believe no food should go into trash cans," Ms. Bragg said. "I believe in everything we purchase, we (must) ask: 'Is this recyclable? Is this compostable?'" Zero waste is the goal, she said. "If we can either recycle or compost all materials, ingredients or food we make ... we have made the world a better place."

Ouroboros Farms tries to close the waste loop with aquaculture. The lettuce, bok choy and other greens grow in water also inhabited by fish,

Local talent stages show at Valley Presbyterian

AROUND TOWN

The 20th Crossroads & Friends Coffee House and Talent Show will take place at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, June 1, at Lane Family Hall on the campus of Valley Presbyterian Church, 945 Portola Road in Portola Valley.

The musical and comedy show will feature local singers, musicians, comedians, mime artists and others. The show will be modeled on "Prairie Home Companion," the Garrison Keillor radio show.

Local bluegrass ensemble Steep Ravine will headline the show. The band of locally based musicians, includes mandolin player Andy O'Brien, a 2007 graduate of Menlo-Atherton High School.

Crossroads Coffee House was first staged in 1994 as a going-away party for the pastors, Mark and Cheryl Goodman-Morris, who were taking their first summer sabbatical. "We had so much fun, we decided that we would say goodbye to them at the beginning of every summer, whether they were leaving town or not," said event emcee Chris Preimesberger, founding member of the Crossroads folk group that hosted the first show and still runs the event today.

The Goodman-Morris will perform a mime sketch in this year's show. Mark Goodman-Morris has a college degree in mime.

Desserts and coffee will be served. Admission is free; donations will be accepted.

Teacher honored for environmental ed

The Garden Club of America has awarded Stewart Slafter, history and garden teacher at Sacred Heart Schools, Atherton, the Elizabeth Abernathy Hull Award. The $1,000 award recognizes individuals who have furthered the early environmental education of children.

Mr. Slafter was nominated by Anne Westerfield, and the award was presented by Lennie Gotcher and Nettie Ramsay, all members of the Hillsborough Garden Club.

"I'm honored and humbled to have received this award," said Mr. Slafter. "I am truly inspired by the Sacred Heart's founding sisters' principles of being responsible for creation and to be stewards of the earth's resources. Teaching our children to respect and protect the environment is an integral part of our campus' sustainability curriculum."

The Sacred Heart campus has 10,000 square feet of organic gardens and a farm with animals. Students assist in the daily care of the gardens and animals, including chickens, turkey, rabbits and goats. The school says that Sacred Heart is the only school on the Peninsula that has been certified by the San Mateo Department of Health to use produce grown on campus in its two cafeterias.
