Envisioning a 'frontier of possibility'

Hillview's principal blazed new trails during first year on the job

By Renee Batti

Almanac News Editor

On a newly built campus, in a spacious new auditorium, at the start of a school year, a dynamic new principal took the microphone.

It was September 2012, and parents of Hillview Middle School students had gathered for Back to School Night to hear what Principal Erik Burmeister envisioned for his first year at the school's helm. After reviewing four of his top goals for the nine months ahead, he came to his final goal, which, he said, was at the heart of why he "eagerly accepted the opportunity" to lead the school:

"This year, we will begin to answer the question, 'What will an excellent 21st century middle school education look like in 10 years?' And instead of waiting 10 years to do it, we're going to start it now, here, at Hillview ..."

The goal was based in part on confidence in the level of support and achievement of staff, parents, and students of the "now." But looking to the future and to the ever-accelerating pace of change in the world, Mr. Burmeister urged parents to consider: "There is a frontier of possibility that awaits our community."

Although change cannot be instantly assessed as successful — or not — the inno-ventions put in place at the school during the last year and that are at the ready to launch in August make it clear that empty words are not part of Mr. Burmeister's lexicon.

In January, he introduced an "acceleration" program to support kids who were performing below grade level in reading and math. Participation was voluntary; 30 students were supported in the reading program, and 30 in math, with a few of the students enrolled in both, according to Vice Principal Willy Haug.

Mr. Haug said the program has had "astonishing results." In the math program, for example, "on average, students ... have made one year of academic growth in six months," he said in an email.

Beginning early in the school year the new principal gathered together a team of staff and parents to review and improve the school's master schedule to accommodate a new approach to teaching and learning. The group was called the Design Team, and used concepts developed by Stanford University's Design School, called "design thinking."

Applying design thinking concepts — a process beginning with empathy and moving through the brainstorming of possibilities, to the design and testing of prototypes, to the naming of a solution — the team came up with a master schedule that significantly changes the flow of school days at Hillview beginning in August.

With the new schedule, there will be three days of 45-minute "direct instruction" periods, focusing on "foundational knowledge and skills," Mr. Burmeister explained in an interview. The other two days will be broken into 90-minute segments, with the focus on "extended learning ... where students engage in the application of knowledge and skills."

Design thinking will be a key component in the longer classes, with stu-

EYE PROTECTION AT HOME

Perhaps the most important statistics surrounding vision-robbing injuries is that 90 percent of them are preventable. By simply avoiding dangerous situations and/or wearing protective eyewear, it is possible to avert the vast majority of eye injuries. Beyond that, you may be surprised to learn that nearly half (44 percent) of eye injuries occur in the home. That is a larger percentage of eye injuries than occurs while playing sports (40 percent). Therefore, aside from properly insisting that their children wear protective eyewear on the court and on the field, parents should wear eyewear that prevents injury at home. This means wearing protective goggles, glasses, and eye shields when mowing the lawn, swinging a hammer, and using caustic cleaning agents.

Our most precious sense, sight plays a large part in our ability to perceive the world around us. Good protective eyewear should be light and fit comfortably, allow you to see clearly, and be adapted to your working position. Visit MENLO OPTICAL at 1166 University Drive, on the corner of Oak Grove Avenue and University Drive, to browse through a wide selection of stylish frames. If you haven't been in to see us yet, we invite you to stop by and check out the many new varieties of eyewear available. For more information, please call 322-3900.

dents focused on collaborative, project-based, creative projects that include design and debate, Mr. Burmeister said.

“Design thinking is simply a great way to solve problems, whether it is a third world health care conundrum or a Menlo Park school schedule,” parent Anne Ballinger Morrissey said in an email last spring, when the new schedule was being announced. Ms. Morrissey was part of the Design Team that crafted the new schedule, and said it was “the direct result of input from all stakeholders — administration, faculty, parents and, most importantly, students.

“It will certainly present change, but the overall school will simply be better. Our kids need to have skills to utilize what they learn in the core curriculum in order to succeed in their futures and the challenges presented by a rapidly changing world. The framework of design thinking will equip these kids for solving problems that we cannot predict today.”

Teacher Michael Kaelin, who was also on the Design Team, did some pioneering work with design thinking at Hillview last term, applying the concepts in a flex class of seventh-graders. He’s eager to “integrate the excellent feedback given by the students” as he plans classes for the new school year, he said.

Under the new master schedule, he said in an email, extended learning days “will allow students the opportunity to develop their prototypes (in hands-on projects) in a way that seems much more authentic. As a teacher, straight-up pen/paper or even laptop testing is fine, but it isn’t always authentic. A new schedule provides opportunities to build more authentic real world assessments to determine what students have learned.”

Designing change

Menlo Park City School District Superintendent Maurice Ghysels, a district leadership team and a handful of teachers attended a “boot camp” with the Stanford Design School last summer, and a partnership between the district and “d school” began soon after. It is now “growing and deepening,” Mr. Ghysels said.

When Mr. Burmeister took his new position later that summer and attended a workshop that included design-thinking discussions, he saw the potential of using the concepts to redesign Hillview, said Allison Liner, the district’s chief learning officer.

Mr. Burmeister said design thinking is a teaching and learning tool that helps kids develop the “soft skills” needed for the world they will live in as adults — skills such as creativity, innovation, and adaptation.

“We must prepare kids for their future, not prepare them for our past,” he said. No one can see what their future will look like because of the rapid change brought about by technology, so “education needs to learn to adapt, and prepare students to be more adaptive.”

Mr. Burmeister is calling the “redesigned” school Hillview 3.0. This school year, all eighth-graders were given iPads managed by the school, and next year — by January, he hopes — all Hillview students will have them. With iPads, students “can access information instantly. ... It then frees the child to move to the next level of the task,” he said.

Students are not able to download apps, and part of their training will be in “effectively evaluating what is a reliable source of information and what is unreliable. ... It’s our duty as a school to help teach them to be responsible users” of technological tools, he said.

Mr. Burmeister came to Hillview from a post as principal of Union Middle School in San Jose. He had recently been named California Middle Grades Principal of the Year.

“Can-do spirit”

In his first year at Hillview, Mr. Burmeister “has just exceeded expectation beyond measure,” Superintendent Ghysels said last week. “He has an ethos — a sense of energy and a can-do spirit.”

Example: “He’s established strong relationships with his teachers, and has developed a lot of teacher leaders there,” Mr. Ghysels said. He’s also nurtured a strong team dynamic with the school’s vice principal; “Erik and Willy — one plus one equals four,” Mr. Ghysels said.

An unexpected strength, he said, is Mr. Burmeister’s “passion and expertise in parent education.” The principal has organized parent education events, and plans many more next year; he does so “in a research-based, humorous and delightful way, where parents walk away hungry for more.”

Parent Anne Morrissey said there’s “tremendous support for Erik Burmeister throughout the district.” A mother of two kids in the district, with one in private school, Ms. Morrissey sees Hillview as a “fantastic school” that’s only getting better. “Hillview will be in a class of its own in the next few years, and people from all over the country will be asking Erik, ‘How did you make this happen in a public school?’” ■

Jerry Carlson resigns from Atherton council

By Renee Batti
Almanac News Editor

Jerry Carlson has made it official: He will step down from the Atherton City Council on July 1 after serving for seven and a half years. The council on June 19 will discuss whether to appoint his successor or call for a special election.

Mr. Carlson, whose term expires in December 2014, announced in April he plans to move out of town and resign from the council. He now serves as vice mayor, and at the Wednesday meeting, the council will appoint another council member to fill that post.

The council must decide by July 12 whether voters should choose Mr. Carlson's replacement if the election is to be consolidated with the Nov. 5 election, according to a report by City Manager George Rodericks.

If the council decides to appoint a council member instead, Mr. Rodericks said, there are two options: Independently agree on a candidate, and appoint that person; or, host an open house, inviting candidates to participate, then conduct interviews before making an appointment. Under both options, the council must make the appointment within

Jerry Carlson

60 days of Mr. Carlson's effective date of resignation.

No appointment can be made before July 1, Mr. Rodericks said, but an open house may take place before that date.

Mr. Carlson was appointed to the council in January 2006 to replace Bill Conwell, who died in office the month before. He successfully stood for election in November 2006, and was re-elected in 2010.

In April, he said that he and his wife, Shirley, were putting their house on the market.

Although they plan to move from town, family-care matters make it likely that they will continue to live on the Peninsula, Mr. Carlson told the Almanac.

Also on the June 19 agenda, the council will review and vote on the 2013-14 fiscal year budget. The proposed general fund budget reflects revenues totaling $10.8 million, with $10.4 million in operational spending.

The meeting begins at 7 p.m. in the Council Chambers at 94 Ashfield Road, in the Town Center. ■

PAID OBITUARY

Robert W.F. Jones

June 23, 1935 – June 7, 2013

Robert W.F. Jones died at his home in Menlo Park from complications associated with leukemia. Bob was predeceased by his mother Lura, father Tom and infant son Thomas. He is survived by his wife Ellen; children Marcus (Jean), Aida and Lura; grandchildren Cassius, Griffin, Calvin, Nora, Leland and Annette.

Bob's early years were spent on the road: he was born in Columbia, South Carolina, moved to Hollywood as a toddler, then to New York City and eventually Westfield, New Jersey.

During his stint in the Army they sent him to the North Pole. At this time his love of music blossomed and he became an accomplished guitar and piano player. After the Army, Bob graduated from Lafayette College in Pennsylvania. He then headed west to graduate school at Stanford where he supported himself by slinging burgers at the Oasis and betting on the horses at local race tracks.

In 1960 he accepted a student teaching position at Menlo School. It was love at first tutelage: upon earning his Master's Degree, Bob joined Menlo's faculty and did not leave until his health forced him into retirement in 2000. At Menlo, Bob became the Dean of Studies while coaching Track, Football, Golf, Wrestling, Basketball, among other sports; he taught a variety of subjects including Latin, English, Spanish and Creative Writing; and, for many years he led the Drama Club, the annual Ugly Man Contest and was the faculty advisor to the student paper.

"Bob was and remains a legend in the Menlo community. Even today when graduates reminisce about what made their experience so memorable, Bob Jones tops the list. He was a brilliant teacher whose dedication to his students literally knew no bounds," wrote Norm Colb, Menlo's Head of School.

Generations of young men and women were influenced by Mr. Jones. His erudition, love of learning, friendship, sport and family inspired all who met him. Bob was also a golfer, musician, avid St. Louis Cardinal baseball fan and dogged collector of pretty bad horror movies.

"We live in an age that doesn't believe in heroes and makes fun of people who do. Mr. Jones was my hero," added Paul Guay, Menlo School class of 1975.

Friends and family are invited to a memorial service on Saturday June 29th. Details will be posted on <https://www.facebook.com/people/Robert-Jones/640378950>

Swimmers salute inspiring coach

George French trained Ladera Oaks swimmers, including Olympic contenders, during 1960s and 70s

By Sam Borsos
Special to the Almanac

It's been decades since they were swimming together as kids under the direction of Coach George French, but many of the swimmers on the Ladera Oaks Aquatic Club during the 1960s and 70s reunited Saturday, June 15, to reminisce and thank their childhood coach.

About 100 of those swimmers whom French coached — some of whom went on to compete at national and Olympic levels — gathered for the reunion at the Alpine Inn in Portola Valley.

"It is a dream come true to have this experience with so many great individuals," French said. "All of these kids have been wonderful parents, successful professionals, leaders in their field and great examples."

From 1962 to 1981, French coached Ladera Oaks swimmers, including John Naber, who won four gold medals and one silver at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

French left Ladera Oaks in 1981 to take a marketing and sales position for a construction company. Twenty years later, he was offered an assistant coaching position for a swimming team in Folsom, and eventually became the head coach of the California Capital Aquatics swim team in Roseville, California. He retired in 2008.

Wendover Brown, 59, who swam for the Ladera Oaks club starting at age 7, says she was the first swimmer that French took to the national and Olympic trials in 1968. She was 13, the minimum age required to compete.

Under French's coaching, she recalls having two practices a day, before and after school, and competing at high level tournaments on the weekends. Brown expressed her appreciation for French as not only a coach, but a life mentor.

"This is a coach who touched and inspired many kids to better lives and greater contributions to society," Brown said. "This reunion is a testament to a great coach and the value of sports in young people's lives."

Olympic gold medalist Naber joined the Ladera Oaks team when he was 13. He is now 57. A 1977 graduate of the University of Southern California, Naber participated at a high athletic level since his time with French, but says he enjoyed his time at Ladera Oaks the most.

"George was the only coach I ever had who took the time to get in the water with me," Naber said. "He was a great teacher of technique and character."

At the reunion, French's former students presented him with a 50-year-old Swiss movement stopwatch to commemorate his impact on their lives.

"Today, all the stopwatches are digital and they have a lot of features and are accurate to the hundredth of the second — you can sync them with a starting gun," Brown said. "In our day, 50 years ago, everyone used a regular Swiss movement stopwatch."

The watch is engraved with French's full name on the front, and a message on the back that says, "Thank you for the golden times, Your Swimmers at Ladera Oaks." ■

Journalist Bill Workman dies at 77

A memorial service will be held from 2 to 6 p.m. Sunday, July 1, at the Kings Mountain Community Center for William "Bill" Spears Workman Jr., an award-winning journalist and longtime Woodside resident. Mr. Workman died June 11 after a battle with prostate cancer. He was 77.

Mr. Workman worked for the Boston Globe before moving west for a John S. Knight Fellowship at Stanford University in 1968-69. After graduation, he returned to the Globe, where he covered the Chappaquiddick incident in 1969, when a female passenger was killed after U.S. Senator Ted Kennedy drove his car off a bridge.

He joined the San Francisco Chronicle in 1970. As a reporter, he covered many major news stories, including the Patty Hearst kidnapping in 1974 and the Chowchilla kidnappings in 1976. According to his wife, Marla Lowenthal, Mr. Workman made many television appearances on local news stations during his coverage of the Billionaire Boys Club scandal.

After years as a general reporter, Mr. Workman became the Peninsula bureau chief for the San Francisco Chronicle. For five years he wrote a column "Along the El Camino," covering stories and people on the Peninsula. After retiring, he freelanced for Gentry magazine for almost a decade, and for San Jose Magazine. For many years, he served as president of the Peninsula Press Club.

Mr. Workman was born in Malden, Massachusetts. He graduated from Malden High School in 1954 and joined the U.S. Army. After the Army, he studied journalism at Boston University and worked as a reporter for the Albany (New York) Knickerbocker News.

In 2009, the Almanac printed "A bench on Kings Mountain" by Marla Lowenthal. The article described Mr. Workman, who had a home in Kings Mountain, as an avid hiker. After suffering a stroke in 2005 and becoming wheelchair-bound, Mr. Workman knew he would never hike the trails again.

In remembrance, he wanted to put a bench on Kings Mountain saying "Bill loves Marla and Marla loves Bill." When the couple learned the bench would cost more than $3,000, they asked friends and family to chip in. And they did. More than 70 people came to the bench's dedication that spring in 2009. "We wanted to share this story of love and friendship. We wanted to share our love with the community and give back by providing hikers with a place to sit and enjoy the splendor of San Mateo County's redwoods," the article concludes.

Mr. Workman is survived by his wife, Marla Lowenthal; and son Joshua Workman of Fairfax.

Portola Valley panel issues report on affordable housing

By Dave Boyce
Almanac Staff Writer

The Portola Valley Town Council now has community opinion to refer to as the town makes plans for housing that is affordable to people of low and moderate incomes, as required by state law.

Of the four options available to the town — granny or in-law units, below-market-rate homes built in concert with new subdivisions, housing for employees on or near the grounds of commercial enterprises or institutions, and homes independent of any enterprise or institution — a committee of nine resident-volunteers endorsed the first three.

In preparing the 11-page report, the committee members, who were appointed by the council, met six times over three months as they looked into this complex and sometimes controversial topic. Subcommittees met separately and organized community meetings and researched related topics.

Granny units — second units on a property — were the clear favorite, in part because residents prize the town's rural character and structures that blend into the wooded open space that dominates the landscape. Second units give homeowners discretion in choosing designs consistent with that rural ethic.

The report acknowledges the interests of people who work in town but cannot afford the seven-figure price tag that comes with a home there. The recommendation: consider homes on sites where "housing is not the pri-

Longtime Menlo School teacher and coach dies

A memorial service will be held Saturday, June 29, for Robert W. F. Jones, who died June 7 at his home in Menlo Park from complications associated with leukemia. He was 77.

For 40 years, Mr. Jones was associated with Menlo School, teaching Latin, English, Spanish and creative writing. He led the Drama Club for many years, the annual Ugly Man contest, and was faculty adviser to the student paper. He also coached track, football, golf, wrestling, basketball, and other sports. His health forced him into retirement in 2000.

"Bob was and remains a legend in the Menlo community," wrote Norm Colb, newly retired as head of school at Menlo. "Even today, when graduates reminisce about what made their experience so memorable, Bob Jones tops the list. He was a brilliant teacher whose dedication to his students literally knew no bounds."

Mr. Jones was born in Columbia, South Carolina, moved to Hollywood as a toddler, then to New York City, and, eventually, to Westfield, New Jersey.

During his stint in the U.S. Army, he was sent to the North Pole. After service, he graduated from Lafayette College. He then headed west to graduate school at Stanford University, where he earned a master's degree and supported himself by working at the Oasis Beer Garden in Menlo Park and betting on the horses, say family members. He accepted a teaching position at Menlo School in 1960.

Mr. Jones was a golfer, accomplished guitarist and pianist, avid St. Louis Cardinal baseball fan, and "collector of bad horror movies," say family members.

He is survived by his wife Ellen, children Marcus, Aida and Lura; and six grandchildren. A son, Thomas, died in infancy.

mary use," including agricultural or undeveloped land, such as the Hawthorn Estate at the corner of Portola and Alpine roads.

The committee also favored assigning a percentage, typically 15 percent, of a new subdivision to below-market-rate homes. This program "needs more teeth so that the housing actually gets built," committee member Carter Warr said.

The Association of Bay Area Governments sets quotas for affordable housing. Under those quotas, between 2014 and 2022, Portola Valley should plan for 21 homes for very-low-income residents, 15 for low-income residents, and 15 for moderate incomes — $86,500 for an individual in San Mateo County, and $123,000 for a family of four. Granny units address much of the need, but state law requires multi-family zoning, a spokesman for the state Department of Housing and Community Development told the Almanac.

A provision in the Blue Oaks subdivision set land aside in 1991 for eight small below-market homes, but they were never built. The site's topography and the high cost of building in Portola Valley dimmed their chances among potential developers. The town sold the site in late 2012 for $2.88 million.

The committee's report does not favor moderate-income homes not affiliated with an existing commercial enterprise. Such projects, if they arise, should be preceded by "very, very public discussion," Mr. Warr said. Passersby should not see "a discernible difference between the rest of the town and where the unaffiliated housing would be."

A pesticide clean-up issue led the council to allow to expire a purchase contract for a former plant nursery for a small number of condos at 900 Portola Road. This proposal for unaffiliated homes drew vigorous opposition from nearby single-family homeowners.

It was not long after that contract expired that the council opted for the Ad Hoc Affordable Housing Committee to consider the issue over three months and prepare a report.

Former mayor Steve Toben chaired the committee. The other members were Carter Warr, Bud Eisberg, Judith Hasko, Susan Dworak, Wanda Ginner, Judith Murphy, Jon Myers, Andrew Pierce and Onnolee Trapp.

The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown herein. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 714 573-1965 or visit this Internet Web site, priorityposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case 1309. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. DATE: 06/10/13 Parker Foreclosure Services, LLC PO Box 2940 Ventura, CA 93002-2940 (800) 570-3500 Donald D.
